England Ahead, Two Ways
Ford Sees Light in Darkness
Big Money, Well Used
A Lindbergh Theory

NEWS FOR TODAY is concentrated on the great flying race, London to Australia, nearly half way around the earth. When this was written one of the English teams, Scott and Black, was leading. Overtaking the flying Mollisons, they had landed at Singapore last night at 6 p. m., our daylight standard time, and the Mollisons had fallen back to fourth place. They may catch up. The Netherlands team, Parentier and Moll, held second place.

The American team, Turner and Pangborn, third in the race, sent word while the Britishers were landing at Singapore that they, the Americans, were lost. They did not know exactly where, somewhere in Aldrich's "desolate windswept space," looking for a safe place to land. But they were in no danger and not discouraged.

The relative positions of the British and American fliers remind you of the relative positions, industrially and prosperity-wise speaking, of the British and American nations.

This fair country, at the moment is "somewhere up in the air, looking for a safe place to land." Fortunately, it, also, is not in danger, or discouraged.

Henry Ford, who even now pays out hundreds of millions a year, directly and indirectly, for well paid labor, sees "light in the darkness," and says our "Santa Claus methods" of handing out money have "made softies of many Americans." But, in President Roosevelt's apparent determination to encourage independence and allow business men to run their own businesses, Mr. Ford sees great hope. He thinks we are crawling up over the top.

Let's hope we shall see from the summit, not too far off, bunches of prosperity as big as the bunches of grapes that cheered the Israelites nearing the Promised Land.

Receiving an honorary degree of doctor of laws, and speaking at William and Mary College, where Thomas Jefferson, Patrick Henry, John Marshall, James Monroe and John Tyler were students in the old Virginia days, the President gave full and generous credit to John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for his patriotic work in restoring to its colonial condition Virginia's ancient city, Williamsburg, "The Cradle of American Liberty."

In emulation of Mr. Rockefeller's fine work, President Roosevelt said, the government is restoring Jamestown and Yorktown and, "when the work at Jamestown, Williamsburg and at Yorktown is completed, we shall have saved for future generations three historic places, the nation's birthplace, at Jamestown, the Cradle of Liberty at Williamsburg and the sealing of your independence at Yorktown."

Praising Mr. Rockefeller's generous, wise use of his money, the President did not seem to share the view of some "New Dealers" who think that financial success in industry is a mark of depravity even when the money is honestly earned and wisely spent.

And it should be remembered that generous use of wealth by the Rockefellers, father and son, in the cause of education, science, art and health protection, to which they have given hundreds of millions, will seem unimportant to future historians, compared with the elder Rockefeller's service in demonstrating the wasteful folly of cut-throat competition, and proving the

Legion Hear Bonus Demand

MORE ARMS, IS PLEA AT MIAMI

By Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Oct. 22—Pleas for early but not immediate payment of the soldier bonus and for strong national defense were heard at the opening session here today of the American Legion's 16th national convention.

The meeting was called to order by National Commander Edward A. Hayes in a large amphitheater in Bayfront Prk where thousands of neatly uniformed Legionnaires gathered in a tropical, gaily decorated setting.

Thrusting the controversial bonus question into the opening session United States Senator Frederick Steiwer (R. Ore.) urged that action on payment of the adjusted compensation certificates be deferred for the present.

"Disinterested and patriotic service presents a question whether this convention should take an unequivocal stand for the immediate cash payment," Steiwer declared.

EARLY PAYMENT URGED

The senate proposed that the Legion consider the advisability of "standing for early payment and asking only that our government meet this obligation at a time when it will result in the minimum burden to the people of the country."

"A postion of this kind," he said, "would increase the prestige of the Legion. There is much reason to believe that a demand for immediate payment would intensify animosities and arouse an organized opposition which will make favorable action more difficult."

Speaking for strong national defense, Thomas H. Healy, assistant dean of Georgetown University's School for Foreign Service, told

Hyde Park Girl Dying in Plunge

Returning home after an absence of more than two months, Miss Palma Rampino, 19, plunged three stories early today from her bedroom window in Wilton street, Hyde Park, following a rebuke by her father.

Landing on a concrete walk, the girl sustained a possible fracture of the spine and possible internal injuries. In City Hospital, however, it was said she would live, although she may be crippled for life.

According to police, Palma was reported missing on August 17 to the Missing Persons Bureau by her sister, Mrs. Antoinette Santili. Detective William Ross was told she had been missing since the previous day, had been last seen in South Boston and might go to Lowell.

Last night, her father told police the girl returned home for the first time since her disappearance and went out again about 7 p. m., saying she would be home early.

She returned again shortly after 10 o'clock, but remained in the apartment of her sister on the first floor. The father went down, he said, and rebuked her for her actions, the girl responding by going upstairs and into her room.

Some time later, her cousin, Thomas Rampino, who lives next door, was awakened by groans outside his window. He found the girl, bleeding and unconscious, a crumpled heap on the walk.

$100,000,000 IN LOTTERY RING BARED

By Associated Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 23—Samuel Miller, 59, arrested in connection with an alleged huge lottery syndicate which was described by police as operating in the United States and Canada on a $100,000,000 basis annually, waived a hearing today and was held in $10,000 bail for grand jury action.

Miller was taken into custody Saturday, at his home, in a raid in which police said they [illegible] 12,000 lottery tickets, including many on horse races and football games.

Assistant District Attorney John A. Boyle testified today that Miller is the chief agent of the syndicate in the Philadelphia area, and that the headquarters of the ring in this country are in Reading. He said that although the alleged "syndicate's" receipts were $100,000,000 annually, few prizes were given.

He explained that information of Canadian operations of the syndicate, seized in the raid on Miller's home, will be turned over to Canadian authorities, and that evidence of operation in other states will be given to the Federal Department of Justice.

Miller, Boyle said, admitted to police his connection with the alleged scheme. He hired salesmen, the official explained, to sell the tickets, and was "head and part of an extensive organization."

Some of the lottery tickets, Boyle said, were issued for drawings on horse race sweepstakes in England and Ireland.

Officials Battle Over 'Pretty Boy's' Pal

By Associated Press

Indiana, Pa., Oct. 22—Heavily armed posses of sheriff's officers and highway patrolmen today began a hunt for a man reported seen driving an automobile, "with a rifle resting on one shoulder," on suspicion he may be the fugitive "Pretty Boy" Floyd.

Wellsville, O., Oct. 22 (AP)—Chief of Police J. H. Fultz, shown warrants charging Adam Richetti with murder in connection with the Union Station massacre at Kansas City in June, 1933, said flatly today:

"I will not turn the man over."

At the time Fultz made his announcement, two government agents and a state official from Missouri were in the jail building with warrants, waiting to take custody of Richetti.

WON'T EXPLAIN ACTION

Fultz said he did not have time to explain his action in refusing the Missouri officers custody of Richetti. Richetti has been charged with shooting to kill in connection with the gun fight Saturday in which Charles "Pretty Boy" Floyd escaped and Richetti was captured.

Washington, Oct. 22 (AP)—J. Edgar Hoover, director of investigation for the Department of Justice, said today that local authorities at Wellsville, O., had refused to permit federal agents to seize

Regarding business conditions, he added:

"The fellows I've seen around the hotels have a better feeling."

U. S. AIRMEN THIRD; RACE NEAR END IN AUSTRALIA

By Associated Press

Port Darwin, Australia, Oct. 22—C. W. A. Scott and Campbell Black, after hasty repairs to a faulty motor, hopped off at 8:35 a. m. (E. S. T.) today, for Charleville, still in first place in the London-to-Melbourne air derby.

Meanwhile, today the first fatality of the air race occurred when Harold D. Gilman of Great Britain and his co-pilot J. K. C. Baines, crashed in flames in Italy, between Soggia and Bari, according to word reaching here. Both were burned to death.

Last to arrive at Mildenhall, they were the first to die in the great race. They had been dogged with trouble, first by a forced landing at Lyon, then hopping to Marseille, where engine trouble developed.

SCOTT FAR AHEAD

They were racing for Rome, almost at the tail-end of the procession when the accident happened.

The disaster left only 13 planes in the derby out of an original 20.

Scott's machine seemed to be working perfectly when he took off on his final 2176-mile stretch with the flier still confident of winning the $50,000 prize for first place.

Should he experience further motor trouble, however, the Dutch team of Parmentier and Moll stood an excellent chance of overtaking him, with Turner and Pangborn following in third place.

The Dutch team had arrived in Rambang, Java, and hopped for Port Darwin while Turner was leaving Singapore.

TURNER STILL HOPEFUL

Frantically they worked over their engine, strained by traveling more than 9000 miles at an average speed of around 175 miles an hour.

Parmentier and Moll in second place in the air classic, flew over Samarang, Java, at 7:35 a. m., E. S. T., approximately half way between Singapore and Darwin.

Miles behind came Turner and Pangborn, still in third place. They hopped from Singapore for

Mechanics working at high pressure had the faulty Scott plane engine firing again within an hour after arrival.

Scott's spectacular record of approximately 3 days, 4 hours and 22 minutes out of Mildenhall to Australia was secure, but the rich prize awaiting the first to reach Melbourne appear to be slipping from his grasp.

Turner and Pangborn in their big Boeing transport plane spent 39 minutes at Alor Star and then made Singapore at 9:05 a. m. (EST) today.

Holding fourth place, now that the Mollisons have defaulted, Lieutenant Cathcart Jones and Ken Waller of Great Britain, arrived at Allahabad at 1:32 a. m.

POLANDO HAS TROUBLE

They are flying a De Havuland comet plane, with a gypsy VI motor, the same type the leaders are using.

A damaged fuel pipe forced John H. Wright and John Polando, the only other American team still competing, to remain for hours in Athens, but they left at 9:16 last night for Aleppo, Syria. They were held there by the damaged pipe.

The British pair of squadron leaders, David E. Stodart and K. G. Stodart, arrived at Aleppo at 12:44 a. m. today and prepared for Bagdad, 46 minutes later.

Valuable time was dropped by Turner and Pangborn when they became lost in the darkness last night over Allahabad. They feared they were running short of gasoline, but when they finally located the air field they found their apprehensions were caused by a defective fuel gauge.

Cheerful, although they are hours behind the first two planes, the Americans ate a hasty meal and took off an hour and a half later. They said they were still in the race.

Scott and Black, the fast-flying leaders, narrowly escaped a crack-up when they landed at Singapore. They bumped into the ground hard but their plane escaped damage.

The Mollisons lost their way after leaving Karachi, India, and were forced to land at Jodhpur to get their location. They then continued to Allahabad, only to drop out of the race. They were leaders until yesterday.

TURNER AFTER DUTCHMAN

Six entrants have dropped out, including Jacqueline Cochran and Wesley Smith of the United States, who were forced down at Bucharest the first day.

Charles J. Melrose arrived at Nicosia, Cyprus, at 1:30 a. m. and left 15 minutes later.

"I am well up on my handicap," the Australian said.

Turner said the day's trip had been uneventful. He would not announce definite plans. Asked if he believed he could overtake the flying Dutchmen in their American (Douglas) plane, Turner answered:

"I am not making any predictions."

A large crowd accorded the Americans an enthusiastic reception. They surged under the wings of their big (Boeing) transport plane to catch a glimpse of the fliers.

Turner refused additional food, saying he probably would not eat again until reaching Port Darwin.

FLYING OUT OF RACE

T. Neville Stack and S. L. Turner of England, who dropped out of the race because of motor trouble at Marseille, arrived at Rome. They are continuing to Australia.

J. D. Hewett and C. E. Kay of New Zealand left Bagdad at 2:32 a. m. for Karachi, India.

Flying Officer C. G. Daviee and Lieutenant-Commander C. N. Hill, British entrant in the handicap race, departed from Athens and Harold D. Gilman of England left Rome for Athens.

Raymond Parer and Geoffrey E. Hemsworth of New Guinea, who left Paris last, developed further engine trouble today and dropped out of the race at Le Bourget, France. They returned there after starting for Athens.

SET NEW RECORD

It was dusk here (6:08 a. m. E. S. T.) when Scott and Black came in from a perilous crossing of the Timor Sea, only one motor functioning.

They had reduced the best previous record by almost two-thirds.

Charles T. P. Ulm of Australia flew from England to Australia in six days 17 hours and 45 minutes in 1933. The record stood until today.

Scott's relentless pursuers, Parmentier and Moll, appeared feverish and excited upon reaching Singapore, dispatches revealed.

They used wet sponges to refresh themselves, then took off for Darwin, but landed at Batavia, Java, 570 miles away, at 5:36 a. m., E. S. T.

Stevens Freed in Hotel Fraud Suit

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 22 (AP)—The penitentiary sentence facing Ernest J. Stevens, whose family was charged with wrecking a life insurance company to save a hotel, was cancelled today by the Illinois supreme court.

Ruling there had been no intent to defraud the Illinois Life Insurance Co. when large loans were made to the Stevens Hotel Co. of Chicago, the high court reversed the conviction for embezzlement.

11 Barbers Fined for Unclean Shops

Eleven East Boston barbers were fined $5 each today when they were summoned into district court there on complaint of Inspector George M. Blanchette of the state health department.

Judge Joseph M. Barnes ordered the fines suspended two months on the promise of the 11 to clean up their shops. All had pleaded guilty through Attorney Anthony Centracchio.

PATRICIA ELLIS MRS. WEBB

Threatened kidnaping charges failed to materialize today against Mrs. Frances Williams, arrested here after Minneapolis authorities had accused her of illegally taking custody of her daughter, Patricia Ellis. Patricia's parents are divorced. The little girl, shown here with Mrs. Olive Webb, Children's Aid Society agent, was turned over to her mother after the latter had been freed by the court. Girl and 6 Go On Trial in Harvard 'Red' Rioting

With the claim that "they had as much right as the Harvard band, the Salvation Army "and others who hold rallies," six youths and a girl went on trial in Middlesex court today for a demonstration at the Harvard commencement last June against Dr. Ernst Hanfstaengl.

All had been found guilty in district court and sentenced to 30 days and fined $5.

One of the youths, arrested as Charles McBride, admitted on the stand today that his real name is Timothy Burr, 21, of Clark street, Cambridge. The others were Miss Sarah Barr, 26, of Harvard street, South End; Irwin Miller, 28, of Newbury street, Back Bay; Arvid Johnson, 25, of Boardman street, Cambridge; John Lenthier, 20, of Clark street, Cambridge; Joseph Dauber, 25, of Central square, Cambridge; and Joseph Jacobs, 31, of Norwell street, Dorchester.

First to testify before Judge George James and a jury was Sergeant Thomas J. Stokes of Cambridge police, who was thwarted for a time in the arrest of Burr because of a chain with which Burr was locked to the Harvard fence.

Stokes said he arrested Burr after he had demanded a permit to speak and none was produced. He told the jury he had to send to a garage for bolt cutters before he could sever the chain.

Attorney A. Warner, representing some of the defendants, charged his clients had as much right as any others to make a speech at Harvard. He cited the parade of various bands and meetings of the Salvation Army.

Burr claimed in testimony that the raid of police drew huge crowds that blocked traffic, rather than the demonstration.

Quintuplets Thrive on Air and Sunshine

Callender, Ont., Oct. 22—Plenty of fresh air and sunshine seems to be agreeing with the Dionne quintuplets.

All of the babies except Cecile pushed the weight of their scales to a gain today, with Yvonne in the lead.

She weighed in at 10 pounds, 1 ounce while the others followed closely behind.

They are all sporting a real "life saver's tan" due to their daily basking in the sun.

Fire Routs Families

The families of Albert A. Hamwey and Joseph Yezzak were driven from their apartments to the street when fire broke out in the two-story house on Central avenue, Medford. The origin of the fire, which destroyed the upper front part of the building, causing $1800 damage, was undetermined.

MOTHER WINS 'KIDNAP' GIRL IN COURT

Reunion took place today in Pemberton square courthouse when Patricia Ellis, 10, was restored to her mother and stepfather after what threatened to be kidnaping charges against the latter had been erased officially.

The mother, Mrs. Florence Williams, 36, and her second husband, George S. Williams, 52, of Windsor, Me., a power company official, had been taken into custody by Boston police at request of Minneapolis authorities, who charged that they had abducted Patricia from the custody of her father.

Later, however, the Minneapolis police telegraphed instructions to release them, as they were not wanted. These telegrams were shown today to Judge Zottoli in municipal court and he dismissed the process for a fugitive from justice warrant and restored the $2500 bail.

RESTORED TO MOTHER

Then they went into juvenile court, where Lieutenant-Detective George V. Augusta told Judge Perkins that inasmuch as Boston police had taken Patricia and placed her in charge of the Children's Aid Society, the police were now moving to restore her to the mother and stepfather.

The order was issued, Patricia was clasped in the mother's arms, and then the happy trio slipped out a rear door of the courthouse and were gone.

The mixup arose as the result of the failure of Middlesex probate court to award custody of Patricia when her mother and Major Paul M. Ellis, then an army instructor at Cornell University, were divorced in March 1931.

FATHER PLANS BATTLE

According to Mrs. Williams, the child had lived with her in Maine for seven years. Last Christmas, she said, Major Ellis asked to have Patricia visit him for a week, but instead of sending the girl back, he took her on a South American cruise and then went to Minneapolis.

Mrs. Williams said she consulted a lawyer who told her she has as much legal right to the custody of her daughter as her former husband. So she brought the child to Boston.

POLICE PROBE VICE CHARGE

Charges made in an anonymous letter to Police Supt. Martin H. King that the "nigger" pool and vice rackets are flourishing in Boston even more than during prohibition, were being investigated by police today.

The letter, according to Supt. King, included no names of places, but did designate districts where the pool and vice activities have increased.

A copy of the letter was sent to captains of 11 divisions with an order that an investigation be started in these precincts.

The police superintendent said that he has no idea who sent him the letter, but that it is one of many of the same type he receives periodically. The letter makes numerous charges.

Stalked Kidnaper

Bruno Hauptmann trial story on Page 6.

By Universal Service

Hopewell, N. J., Oct. 22—The tense, nerve-shaking scene that gripped the home of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh in the moments that followed the kidnaping of his baby son has been revealed in detail for the first time here.

It showed Colonel Lindbergh, rifle in hand, seeking the kidnaper or some trace of him in the darkness of the countryside.

Charles E. Williamson, deputy police chief of Hopewell, ended a silence he has kept carefully for two years to give the picture. Williamson and Police Chief Harry Wolf were the first investigators to reach the Lindbergh estate.

LINDY WITH RIFLE

Williamson said his telephone rang about 10 o'clock on the night of March 1, 1932. He continued:

"I answered and the party on the other end said in a hurried and nervous voice:

"'I am Mr. Wheatley the butler at the Lindbergh home. Our baby has gone. Mr. Lindbergh does not want any publicity in the matter. Will you please come to the house immediately.'

"Wolf and I raced to the Lindbergh home. We swung into the driveway and as we neared the house our headlights showed Col. Lindbergh standing outside the door with a rifle in his hands. Col. Lindbergh said:—

"'Come in. The baby's gone.'

"We followed him in. Mrs. Lindbergh was standing in the room, clenching her hands nervously.

FLIER LEADS WAY

"Col. Lindbergh led the way into the baby's room and directly to the crib.

"He did not mention the word kidnap.

"But he pointed to footmarks on the floor, dirt traced across from the window to the crib. He cautioned us, as he moved toward the window to step clear of the marks.

"He pointed to an envelope on the sill, and said:.

"It looks like a note. There are probably finger prints on it. What do you suggest I do with it?

"We suggested that he leave the envelope where it was and wait for a fingerprint expert to examine it. We did not touch it.

"Then Colonel Lindbergh asked us to step outside the house with him and look around. Colonel Lindbergh picked up the rifle as we went out by the front door.

"Around the house, using flashlights, we could plainly see the marks left by the ladder in the soft mud and footprints, the first few sunk deep in the earth, leading away from below the window.

"I am certain to this day that I saw what appeared to be the prints of a woman's heel not far away, and going in the same direction as the other prints.

"When we went back to the house a fingerprint expert who had arrived picked up the note and examined it for prints. He found none.

"Then, with Colonel Lindbergh's permission the note was opened and read.

"When the trooper had finished reading it, Colonel Lindbergh just turned away. He did not speak."

Police Guard Gloria as Battle Resumes

GLORIA VANDERBILT

By Associated Press

New York, Oct. 22—While police maintained guard over the uptown home of Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, the legal joust for the custody of her daughter, Gloria, was resumed today in Supreme Court.

The police guard was prompted by the receipt of a letter by Mrs. Vanderbilt which threatened the life of her 10-year-old child, heiress to a huge fortune.

Laryngitis, which last week prevented Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney from attending the guardianship hearings, had subsided sufficiently today to allow her to testify.

Mrs. Whitney contends that Mrs. Vanderbilt is not a fit parent. Mrs. Whitney is little Gloria's aunt, and the child is at present living in her Long Island home.

The witness was questioned by her attorney, Herbert C. Smyth. She wore a silk muffler around her throat. Public and press are excluded from the hearing, Justice John F. Carew having clamped down the lid after a sensational bit of testimony.

Toy Pistol Bandit Gets $19 in Holdup

Flashing a dangerous-looking water pistol, a lone "gunman" today forced Albert Aaronson of Angell street, Dorchester, the manager of a Thom McAn shoe store at 224 Massachusets avenue, to open the safe and hand over $19. Aaronson said he did not realize until after the man left that he really had a water pistol. The bandit hailed the cab of Charles A. Smith of Lexington street, Everett, and was driven to Northampton and Washington streets. Smith learned of the holdup when he returned to his stand.

BABY LINDBERGH

FLOYD THOUGHT WOUNDED

Both the mayor and the sheriff of the county, Hoover said, had taken a stand to prevent the federal men questioning Richetti of his knowledge of the Kansas City Union Station massacre last year.

Floyd continued to elude a posse of officers and citizens searching neighboring woods for him today.

Believed to be seriously wounded, Floyd entered the woods not far from Wellsville. Officers said there was little likelihood that he had escaped from this section.

Melvin Purvis, investigator for the Department of Justice, expressed his belief that Floyd was dead or dying in the woods.

David Ramsure, a coal miner said, however, that he had seen a man resembling Floyd walk out of the woods and attempt to get a ride on the bordering road. Ramsure said he was unable to tell whether the man had been wounded.

Federal officers from Kansas City arrived here shortly before noon today with warrants charging Adam Richetti with murder in connection with the Union Station massacre at Kansas City in June, 1933.

The officers went into conference immediately with Melvin Purvis, head investigator of the Chicago bureau of the Department of Justice.

Beyond confirming the fact that the Federal officers had brought the warrants, Purvis refused to comment. County officials here had announced they would be ready to turn over Richetti when the warrants arrived.

BANKER SCORES ROOSEVELT POLICIES

By Associated Press

Washington, Oct. 22—A charge that the Democratic party had used the "great powers of government" to put the people's debts within its control was made today before the American bankers' association convention.

John G. Brown, counsel of the Montana bankers' association, made the assertion in a speech questioning the statesmanship of President Roosevelt, accusing United States Senators of sharp practice, and calling the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage act a destroyer of fundamental rights.

Other bankers criticized and praised the administration. President Francis Marion Law, in an interview, said he "did not think the President has it in for the bankers or the bankers for the President."

BENNETT SCORES PLAN

Frank P. Bennett, editor of the United States Investor of Boston, said current theories for a central reserve bank were derived from "among those who think our present system is not docile enough when the treasury speaks."

Irving W. Cook, president of the First National Bank of New Bedford, Mass., while not wishing to be "super-critical," warned against making present emergency measures permanent.

Brown said the Frazier-Lemke bill enabled farmers to evade their just debts and that it was being used to hurry government refinancing of farm debts. He declared:

"When the great powers of the government, used as though martial law existed, are necessary to enable the government to speed a refinancing program to put the people's debts within the control of a political party in power, a program not of your creation, not submitted to the people in constitutional amendment, but of partisan wish and idea, it is time for us to turn and listen to grave words and ideas."

AGAINST CENTRAL BANK

The "grave words" were from a United States supreme court decision which Brown said held that the constitution could not be suspended no matter what the emergency.

Bennett said:: "Contrary to the popular notion, the long and useful records of the Bank of England and the Bank of France furnish no precedent for this purely American proposal of a Central bank. They are not agencies of government, nor are they conducted from the government point of view."

Irving W. Cook, president of the First National Bank of New Bedford, and president of the national bank division, said the key to complete recovery is encouragement to private enterprise. He declared:

"Individual initiative and enterprise constitute the very foundation of our democracy, and commensurate return to each person for the efforts he expends is the road on which America will march again to economic freedom."

A suggestion that bankers analyze the cost of performing their service and install suitable charges came from A. G. Kahn, president of the Union National Bank of Little Rock, Ark. He said the public does not resent charges when it understands them.

SHIVERS

WINTER ILLS ON THE WAY

Washington, Oct. 22—Real winter is coming and the United States public health service is worried about it.

The chief point of concern is when people are going to get sick, and from what.

The fall and winter, of course, are good seasons for colds and what not, but the government doctors don't know what to do about the query of a state health officer asking what grounds there were for a rumor that an influenza epidemic would strike in his section of the country within 30 days.

The service replied that it didn't know. It advised its standard list of precautions against respiratory infection, and continued to watch a "flu epidemic in Puerto Rico. But it couldn't go in for long range forecasting. Just be careful and hopeful, was its advice.

He had stepped from an airplane some 2000 feet above the ground as a featured performer in an air show given near the San Jose airport.

His crushed body was picked up in a field adjoining the airport.

On entering the plane to go aloft, Catlett had handed Jack Cousins, airport manager, a photograph of himself with the remark:

RING FOUND IN COD

Believed Lost in 1906

Now if the Rev. E. T. Drake of the First Presbyterjan Church in Orange, Tex., is right about this thing, Boston's "gold hoarding" codfish is a very aged and traveled cod indeed and one to be looked upon with no little amazement.

This was duly chronicled, and today Police Superintendent Martin H. King received from the Rev. Drake of Orange a letter, stating that the ring probably is his—one that he lost in 1906 while bathing at Corpus Christi Beach in Texas.

The ring, he said, was one given him by his mother, Patsy Capp Drake.

Police Inspector Thomas Conaty sent the minister a detailed description of the ring and then sat back to wonder.

DOG HAPPY

Distemper Cure Is Told

How distemper, the most dreaded of all diseases, may now be prevented by a single injection of a new serum, was revealed today at the opening session of the fifth annual meeting of the New England Veterinary Medical Association, in session at the Hotel Bradford.

Dr. George Watson Little, discoverer of the treatment, told his audience of the 2½-year struggle to perfect the inoculation.

In brief, the treatment consists of first giving the healthy animal the disease, and then injecting the concentrated serum to cure it.

The serum is twice the strength needed to cure the distemper produced by the first injection of the virus of Carre, the cause of the disease.

In his experiments to provide complete immunity against the disease which yearly costs the lives of thousands of pets, Dr. Little had the co-operation of veterinarians from all parts of the United States, Canada and Australia.

NATIVES TO BE LEFT ALONE

PURE RACE IS DOCTOR'S AIM

By International News Service

Suva, Fiji Islands, Oct. 22—An island paradise untouched by the culture of modern civilization.

Such an experiment which would in effect provide a human laboratory to determine the beneficence or curse of modern civilization as applied to native cultural evolution was proposed to the British high commission and government of Fiji by Dr. Robert Archibald Lambert, representative of the Rockefeller Foundation in the Western Pacific.

Rennell Island, also known as Munggave, in the Solomon group would be the scene of the experiment, even missionaries being banned from contact with the natives there. Speaking of the situation Dr. Lambert declared:

"It should be kept as a native reserve in order to preserve in its entirety a culture possessing characteristics that have, or may have, great value to western civilization.

"The Rennell Islanders are probably the only group of people in the world in which the paterfamilias is retained in a pure state, unblemished by the influence of culture. Here we have an opportunity to allow nature to follow its course of social evolution without outside interference and without harm to the native people or to economic value.

"By leaving these people alone as much as possible I believe it may be shown that it is interference with custom, religion, marriage, the family and property, and particularly the infiltration of new customs, that is the cause of the decline of primitive cultures and the ultimate destruction of population.

"The people have a religion perfectly adjusted to their mental outlook. The basic morality of the island is proved by the favorable balance of population. In general, health is good. Any introduction of Christian missions would only be followed by social maladjustment and its attendant disasters."

"If the average husband came home and kissed his wife, she would immediately think he was going away. Why some of you old duffers out there, haven't kissed your wives in years."

BISHOP GIVES UP HUNGER STRIKE

WOMAN NEAR COLLAPSE

George Bishop's "hunger strike" was running a bad second today in Salem jail as the alleged accessory to $20,000 in thefts from the Lynn Co-operative Bank ate a husky breakfast and a huskier dinner.

Meanwhile, Mrs. A. Pauline Crabtre, veteran employe of the bank who is charged with the thefts, was on the verge of collapse in the jail and was in "no condition to talk to anyone," according to her counsel, Richard Sisk.

"She is completely unnerved and unstrung," said Sisk. "She will make no answer to Bishop's statement, at least while she is in this condition."

Bishop, who signified Saturday his intention of going on a hunger strike, "until the truth is told," was defeated today by his appetite and the tantalizing aroma of a dish of oatmeal.

He downed the oatmeal and the rest of the jail breakfast ravenously and when the noon dinner arrived he apparently had placed all thoughts of a hunger strike behind him, because he cleaned up his allotment.

Bishop is alleged to have received part of the $20,000 from Mrs. Crabtre, who is declared to have divorced her husband with the expectation of marrying Bishop.

18 PHILANTHROPIC UNITS TO SHARE IN MONEY

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

A skull-capped, white-bearded venerable, harking back to the days of traditional Judaism, looked down from his gilt-edged frame over a well dressed gathering of Jewish men and women in the Hotel Statler ballroom last night in a probable, figurative musing of how times had changed.

From the redemption of the Israelites from Egyptian bondage to the present time, the story of the Jew, his suffering and martyrdom was dramatically recited as Boston's leading Jews officially launched their drive for $578,160 with which to maintain the 18 constituent organizations of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies.

As a reminder of the past, Jacob Binder's "The Scribe," hung in dignified solemnity from the ballroom balcony, hovered over an enthusiastic assembly to touch Jewish hearts and tug violently at Jewish purse strings.

$204,462 SUBSCRIBED

And it did. To the tune of $204,462.

In less than an hour, Boston Jews came forward with large-sized contributions to subscribe almost half of the quota and to give great impetus to the campaign which actively swings into force today.

As an opening gun, an anonymous gift of $65,000 was announced. Following on the wave of enthusiasm which greeted this contribution was the announced subscription of $27,500 from Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Kirstein and of $10,000 from Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Filene.

And from that moment on, large amounts were subscribed in rapid succession to start successfully the campaign towards an even more successful conclusion.

ARMY AT WORK

For this morning an army of volunteer workers, under the direction of Sidney Rabinovitz, general chairman, and Mrs. Hyman Freiman, directing the women's forces, start on their errand of mercy to enlist every Jewish citizen, who himself is not in want, in the great drive for funds for those who are.

Eloquent oratory and dramatic episodes preceded the gift giving—words that touched Jewish hearts as they told the climatic struggle of the Jew for freedom from persecution and from material slavery.

A special obligation was placed on the Jewish community of Boston by Rabbi Samuel H. Goldenson of Temple Emanu-El of New York city, principal speaker of the evening.

He turned back the pages of Jewish history and reminded the 1200 men and women who had gathered willingly to contribute to the needs of their own poor that the New Deal was just an old Jewish custom. That the first New Dealer was the greatest prophet of Israel. He said:

"Our history is one of a recurrent new deal, of a recurrent reconstruction. Moses, by whose commandments we live, was the first emancipator. There rests upon us a special obligation because we are not brutalized.

NEEDY REMEMBERED

"Had the Jews forgotten the dark and gloomy years that experience of persecution, depression, poverty, martyrdom and slavery in Egypt, we never would have the kind of history we have. We never would have come together this night in Boston to be mindful of those who are now in need, who are waiting for us to answer their cry.

"You will give because this rich past of ours commands this. You will give because you come from a people of martyrs."

From the president of the Philanthropies, Louis E. Kirstein, came the statement that "prejudice and discrimination" are growing and that "there is no denying the fact, we Jews are on trial." He said further:

"By and large throughout the country the Jew is considered to be the most prosperous. He has a reputation of social consciousness.

"The campaign of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies presents a challenge to all of us to see whether the common bond of humanity, the instincts and impulses of sympathy and mutual aid can be awakened at one of the critical times in the lives of so many thousands of our fellow citizens, unemployed still numbering by the millions, dependent and neglected children, thousands of young men and women, bewildered by the social and economic chaos about them.

"In these days when we are becoming accustomed to having the government, and particularly the federal government, take over so many functions and are therefore lulled into a false sense of security regarding our social obligations, it is important to remember that the government assumes only one of the burdens in this catastrophe which has visited millions of our fellow citizens since 1929.

MORE THAN FOOD NEEDED

"Are we willing as business leaders of a great community, as Jewish men, inheritors of a great tradition for social justice, are we willing to say that this is enough? Does not a human being need more than just enough food to keep his body going?"

Others who spoke included Dr. C. F. Wilinsky, head of the Beth Israel Hospital; Mrs. Hyman Freiman, directing the Women's Division; Judge A. E. Pinanski, who appealed for the 190 wards cared for by the Associated; Sidney Rabinovitz, directing the drive, and Mortimer C. Gryzmish, chairman of the dinner committee.

All of these contributions represented an increase over respective pledges of last year.

Mr. Rabinovitz announced that one-third more than last year's quota must be raised by Boston Jewry if the charities associated with the Philanthropies are to carry on.

For the work of the Associated the $578,160 must be obtained, he stressed, as he outlined that $66 represents the cost of one hour in the operation of the 18 constituent organizations.

'MURDER AND SUICIDE'

Describing opposition to national defense as "a strange lot of bed fellows," Healy declared "the thesis that America could arm itself over night is so ridiculous that it is amazing that otherwise intelligent persons hold to it."

"It is a combination of murder and suicide," he said, "to send hastily organized troops against well-trained and well-equipped soldiers."

After calling the convention to order, Commander Hayes introduced Governor Dave Sholtz, who extended Florida's welcome to the Legionnaires.

Declaring that today "we are engaged in a peaceful rebellion against communism and anarchy and are aggressively battling to improve economic conditions in order to make America a better place in which to live," the Governor said he was "confident that in this great contest for human rights and human needs you men of the American Legion will contribute to victories of peace as you formerly contributed to victories of war.

AMERICANS URGED TO GUARD FREEDOM BY KNICKERBOCKER

EUROPE PAYING PRICE FOR DICTATORS, HE BELIEVES

More than 300 million Europeans today are marching the lock-step under dictatorship. Workers in America still are free.

Which are the better off?

H. R. Knickerbocker, brilliant foreign correspondent of International News Service, begins to answer this important and involved question today in the first of a new series of articles, "Democracy versus Dictatorship."

Berlin, Oct. 22—More than 300 million Europeans today are marching the lock step. In the Soviet Union 165 million march under the red flag of Bolshevism. In Italy 40 million march under the black banner of Fascism. In Germany 65 million march under the hooked cross of National Socialism.

America is still free. Her workers are still free. But workers are the propaganda target for every dictatorship in the making. Workmen of Germany, Italy and Russia know that now. How are they faring today under National Socialism, Fascism, Bolshevism?

Sir Oswald Mosley

Are they better off because they scorned democracy or had it taken from them? Have they more to eat or wear and better houses to live in? Is their work easier, more plentiful? Have they more to say, or anything to say about their own fate?

In a word, would an American workman want to exchange American democracy for German National Socialism, Italian Fascism or Russian Bolshevism if he were in a position to know accurately how workmen in these countries live?

These are questions the International News Service is attempting to answer in a first-hand investigation on the spot in Germany, Italy and Soviet Russia.

Some leading men of Europe consider that the answers to these questions are more important even that the answer to that black query "Will there be war?"

Eduard Benesch, astute foreign minister of Czechoslovakia, one of the last surviving democracies in central Europe, told your correspondent:

PRESERVE DEMOCRACY

"It is more important to know whether democracy can be preserved than to know whether war will come. Because war will come anyway if democracy goes, and if war came first the loss of democracy would be its most probable and certainly its most fateful consequence."

Until July of this year the dictators of Europe could argue that war would be more easy to avoid if the peoples of Europe would place themselves unanimously under dictators.

Sir Oswald Mosley, boss of the British Blackshirts, gave your correspondent the argument that a dictator can do more to keep the peace than a Republican statesman, because a dictator does not have to take into account the turbulent spirits of his people.

This went down well, and even Democrats could imagine Hitler and Mussolini coming together like general managers of two rival trusts, to reach an agreement "in restraint of trade" or in restraint of war. Then they did come together, at Venice, in a historical moment, amid pageantry befitting the occasion.

WAR CLOUD GATHERS

They did reach an agreement. Hitler did promise Mussolini to respect the independence of Austria, to call off the Nazi terror in Austria and thus prevent war.

Only thereafter did the whole theory of peace-making among dictators collapse. The Nazi dictator could not keep his promise. From the very date of the Venice meeting the Nazi terror in Austria increased. It grew until scarcely a month after the two dictators met, the bullets of a Nazi Terrorist killed Dollfuss.

More incensed than if he had never met Hitler and had gained from him a promise, Mussolini mobilized. War was not days, but hours away. Hitler, shocked at a threat Germany is in no position to withstand, sent his Black Guard, S. S. to corral and tame the Austrian Legions in Bavaria.

PEACE RESCUED

Peace was rescued, but it was in the eleventh hour, and it will be a long time before advocates of dictatorship can argue that a national boss can do more than a national parliament to keep war away.

War may or may not come under Europe's dictatorships. But liberty has gone from them for good. America has been free for 158 years, longer than any other nation on earth, and so long that Americans have come to take freedom for granted, like air to breathe.

Just because we take it for granted, it is easy to forget how important is liberty under democracy, how swiftly it may be lost and how hardly it may be regained.

"Eternal vigilance," traditional price of liberty has in the last decade become relaxed in the countries still free. In Britain, France, the Scandinavian states, in Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, and even in America, groups infected by the mass examples of the populations of Russia, Italy and Germany have begun to talk of "the illusion of liberty," "the failure of democracy."

ADVOCATE NEW MOVE

They advocate "a try" at something else. They forget that once freedom is gone it takes a long time to get it back.

Russia entered the penitentiary of dictatorship 17 years ago. Italy entered it 12 years ago. Germany entered 19 months ago.

Today only a disastrous defeat in war, or the death of Mussolini or Hitler could shake the Fascist rule in Italy or the Nazi power in Germany.

In the Soviet Union not even the death of Stalin could weaken the Soviet dictatorship. It has lasted too long. It is too well knit. Its instruments—physical power, the Red Army and the secret police—are so thoroughly obedient, and are kept loyal by such shrewd preferment over the masses of the population that the loss of the dictator of the moment would not affect the power of the dictating party. Lenin's death proved that. Only disastrous war could down the Soviet dictatorship.

LIBERTIES LOST

Each of these one-time democracies, for even Russia was a democracy for a brief spell between Czarism and Bolshevism, lost their liberties with an apparently implicit faith that it would not be for long, and it would not be too bad.

Suppose the middle classes of Russia, weak as they are, had known that when the Bolsheviks took power they would physically extirpate the middle classes. Suppose the so-called Kulaks, the allegedly wealthy peasants, had known that the Bolsheviks would eventually "liquidate the Kulaks as a class" and send from three to five million of them off to death.

Suppose the peasants as a whole had known that the Bolsheviks' policy was going to condemn them to a lifetime of exploitation and was going actually to kill by starvation from five to eight million of them in the families of 1921-22 and 1932-33.

10,000 SWUNG RUSSIA

Would, in this case the middle classes, the Kulaks and the peasants as a whole have hung back and allowed that determined, courageous and incredibly tiny group of 10,000 members, who constituted the Bolshevik party in 1917, to seize all power and erect their permanent structure of dictatorship?

Suppose the Liberals, the Socialists, the Christian Democrats and above all the workmen of Italy had known that when Mussolini's Black Shirts marched on Rome in 1922 the whole population of 40 million would be disfranchized, the liberties of the press, of speech and of public assembly destroyed and the entire nation reduced to utter, silent and permanent obedience. Would Italy's Democrats have succumbed so easily?

Mussolini's men in the march on Rome numbered at the most 50 thousand after three days. They could have been stopped by a fraction of the sincere Democrats in the country.

BLAME SOCIAL FORCES

Suppose the democracy of Germany had known what would happen to the common liberties of the German citizen when they allowed Hitler to take power.

Suppose the leaders of the Social Democratic Party, who surrendered their control of the 60 thousand police of Prussia to a Reichswehr lieutenant and two men, had known that within a few months they would all be in concentration camps, or chased over the border or dead.

Suppose the mighty German Trade Unions, with a membership of nine million, had realized that their leaders would soon be arrested, their funds confiscated, their organizations wiped out and the German working man reduced to a voiceless nonentity.

Would Hitler have come to power?

It is the fashion today to blame everything on "great social forces." They are the final arbiters. But lack of knowledge and real lack of imagination on the part of Europe's fallen democracies have been equally to blame with "social forces" for their supine surrender to dictatorships.

Certainly National Socialism in Germany, probably Fascism in Italy, and possibly Bolshevism in Russia could have been defeated at their outset had the people known what it was going to mean to surrender liberty under democracy.

HAMMETT TALE DUE TOMORROW

Dashiell Hammett, America's most famous writer of detective stories, author of "The Thin Man," has written another success. His latest, serial, "The Big Knockover," begins tomorrow in the Boston Evening American.

Mr. Hammett's specialty is to present the underworld realistically, and show gangsters as they really are, he makes no compromise with romantic notions about crime and criminals. Hammett gained his knowledge of the underworld at first hand during a long career as a private detective. He took up writing more or less as pastime while convalescing from war injuries.

From the beginning, his stories won wide favor and rapidly climbed into the best-seller lists. In addition to "The Big Knock-over" and "The Thin Man," his best known books include "The Maltese Falcon," "The Glass Key," "Red Harvest" and the Boston Evening American detective picture strip, "Secret Agent X-9."

Liming Assails Excessive Taxes

Excessive taxation is one of the most serious obstacles to the return of prosperity, and some forms of government seem directed toward new forms of revenue rather than prudent economy, M. D. Liming, secretary of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, told the 20th annual meeting of the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries at Cincinnati today.

He added that too many people look to the government for assistance.

Pictou, N. S., Oct. 22—Mrs. Hilda Margaret Danello, of Franklin, Mass., charged with passing counterfeit United States $10 bills while spending a vacation here, is expected to take the stand again today when her trial is resumed. During Saturday's hearing, she pleaded not guilty and declared that her name was not Danello but Yeaton.

Brookline Man Struck by Trolley

Charles M. Rice, 74, of Verndale street, Brookline, was seriously injured today when struck by a Boston Elevated trolley car inbound as he was crossing Commonwealth avenue and Harvard avenue, Allston. In St. Elizabeth's hospital he was found to be suffering from concussion of the brain and lacerations of the left eye.

B. U. Co-Eds Swim

INDUSTRIES FOR BLIND PLEDGED BY CURLEY

By Frank Reilly

Former Mayor James M. Curley, swinging into central Massachusetts territory today after completing a tour of Cape Cod in his gubernatorial campaign, planned speeches at Fitchburg, Gardner, Leominster and Clinton.

In a statement issued from his Young's Hotel headquarters before starting for Fitchburg, the former mayor promised that one of his first official acts after taking office next January if elected governor would be to reopen the Massachusetts Industries for the Blind.

Curley said:

"I knew that the Republican leaders in the legislature, and particularly one of my Republican opponents, were bad. I thought he was bad when he voted against old age insurance and voted to keep women working in the mills at night.

OPPONENT SCORED

"But I don't think anything that he and his associates have done is quite comparable with the vicious thing done when they closed up the state industries for the blind."

Earlier in the day at a meeting of the Tammany Club of Roxbury, he repeated his praise of the New Deal and President Roosevelt's policies.

RECORD CITED

He said that Boston never had a payless pay day for municipal employes, that not one of them lost his job, that Boston never had a bread line while he was mayor, and that he ended his four years with every financial obligation of the city, as well as every humanitarian obligation, discharged.

As to the outcome of the election he told Cape Cod voters:

"I'll beat Bacon by 200,000 votes, because people can't be fooled permanently. We surrendered our government to the bankers 25 years ago.

"Since then the government has been a government of the bankers rather than of the people. But we will turn it back to the people under the leadership of President Roosevelt."

HAUPTMANN TO ESCAPE TRIP TO SCENE OF KIDNAPING

PARLEY CALLED TODAY TO FIX TRIAL DATE

By International News Service

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 22—Bruno Richard Hauptmann will not be taken to the scene of the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby, Attorney-General David T. Wilentz declared while discussing plans for the trial of the tight-lipped prisoner, who is now in jail at Flemington.

Whether the jury will be taken to the scene of the crime will depend upon the attitude of presiding Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, he added.

Wilentz said the time of arraignment of Hauptmann would be decided today by Justice Trenchard.

Attorney General Wilentz and Colonel H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey state police, conferred with the press this morning in the former's office in the State House.

Asked if the state's case against Hauptmann was complete, Wilentz replied:

"Yes."

Reporters asked Wilentz why Hauptmann had been refused reading matter such as books. The attorney general said this was up to Sheriff John Curtis of Hunterdon county.

"Colonel Schwarzkopf and I see no reason why Hauptmann cannot be afforded proper reading matter," said Wilentz. "In the Bronx county jail he was allowed only a few books. As far as we are concerned, he will be allowed more liberty in this respect than he has had."

The attorney general said that if reading matter is permitted Hauptmann, precautions will be taken so that he does not get material with sharp edges, such as magazines. No chance will be taken on the prisoner trying to commit suicide.

No steps have yet been taken on the matter of a possible change of venue, Wilentz made clear. He was asked if Attorney James M. Fawcett of the defense had made such a request and his reply was "No." Wilentz did not expect to take the initiative in this respect.

The Hunterdon County courthouse at Flemington is small and antiquated and provisions for handling the scores of newspaper men who will "cover" the trial are extremely poor.

Wilentz said he could not see how the ends of justice would be served by allowing one or two newspaper men to interview Hauptmann in the jail for the entire press. Such a procedure, he thought, would be a "travesty." He added that no arrangements had been made for the taking of pictures of Hauptmann in his cell.

The attorney-general stated that the New York and the New Jersey police are still working on "leads." This fact, he explained, was not inconsistent with his statement that New Jersey feels that its case against Hauptmann is complete.

Wife Optimistic in Fight for Hauptmann; May Take Baby to Court

MRS. HAUPMANN MANFRED HAUPTMANN

In a cheerful mood as she predicts that her husband, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, will prove his innocence of the Lindbergh kidnaping and murder, Mrs. Anna Hauptmann says that she and her 10-months-old son, Manfred, will both be in court to encourage the defendant as he battles against a guilty verdict which would send him to the electric chair. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

Mrs. Anna Hauptmann is shown here as she paid a visit to her husband, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, who is at present in the jail at Flemington, N. J., awaiting trial for the murder of the Lindbergh baby. It is said that Mrs. Hauptmann will soon move to Flemington to be near her husband. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

ATTACK AIMED AT MANNING

By Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 22.—The Rt. Rev. William T. Manning, bishop of New York, was accused of undertaking "to unchurch great bodies of Protestant christendom who have failed to hold his ideas as to the divinity of the episcopate."

This was set forth in a resolution offered by Roswell Page of Beaver Dam, Va., a lay delegate to the House of Deputies.

The House of Bishops, meanwhile, began discussion of a change in the church canons which would make more absolute the authority of the bishop in the dissolution of pastoral relations.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. ©1931 C. M. Co.

Hauptmann Paces His Cell, Loses 30 Pounds

By Associated Press

Flemington, N. J., Oct. 22—During Bruno Richard Hauptmann's incarceration in the Bronx County jail, Sheriff John M. Curtiss declared today, the husky carpenter lost 30 pounds.

The prisoner's weight loss is evident in his appearance, the sheriff said. Doctors who have examined him daily since he was rushed from New York to the Hunterdon County jail, however, reported no further decrease in his weight after his arrival.

Sheriff Curtis said that his prisoner, who is awaiting trial on a charge of having murdered the kidnaped Lindbergh baby, exhibited a better appetite over the weekend.

Hauptmann's brekfasts, however, still consist of nothing more than black coffee.

As authorities prepare their case against him, Hauptmann nervously paces his cell. He is allowed no reading matter. His guards have been instructed to converse with him only when he requests something.

Sheriff Curtis said that the prisoner had been denied books and papers by an "order of an official of the court." He did not identify the official.

The sheriff said that Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, who will preside at the trial, would come to Flemington today to determine what privileges and comforts could be allowed Hauptmann.

Clothing brought to him last Saturday, the day after his arrival, by his wife will not be given him, the jail authorities having supplied the prisoner with essential garments.

Maine Banks Hunt Stoll Ransom Bills

By Associated Press

WANT TO LOOK YOUNG?

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must get at the cause—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for calomel to act on the intestines, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c, 60c.

COMPTON SEEKS AIR AID

By Associated Press

Washington, Oct. 22—Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, today recommended to the President's aviation commission government subsidies for aviation developments. He cited as an example a fog dispelling method under development at M. I. T.

Compton, who said the apparatus would permit clearing of an area half a mile long and of sufficient height and width for radio compass equipped planes to land in fog, said the subsidy should be allotted by the national advisory committee for aeronautics.

"A relatively small fund," he said, "would do more to advance aviation than anything else I could think of. Army and navy air services would receive rights to such inventions, commercial operators paying for franchises."

Compton also advocated an "outright" subsidy for air transport lines, observing that subsidies "under the guise of mail contracts" at a later time might place the operators "in a difficult position." Subsidies if called such, might, however, take the form of mail contracts, he said.

Compton urged a permanent aviation commission, and a technical advisory committee to consider aviation patents. Control of a number of patents is necessary to permit production of a whole airplane, he said, yet at present a manufacturer attempting such control is "likely to be called a monopoly."

STARS WELCOME MISS DAVIES

Hollywood, Oct. 22—Where the waves of the Pacific wash the feet of the Palisades in Santa Monica, a slice of ancient Tyrol was brought to life Saturday night for the colorful setting in which Marion Davies was accorded the most valued gift of her brilliant career.

The gift?

A testimonial of unwavering friendship from the two hundred and fifty men and women who gathered to say:

"Welcome home!"

And Marion answered them, a choke in her throat:

"It's great to have friends and be home again."

The home-coming party, with the "welcome mat," figuratively flung across the film town, served a two-fold purpose. It was not only Hollywood's tribute to a favorite daughter, but heralded the formal opening of the cinema's winter social season.

G. O. P. ISSUES COST BACON MANY VOTES

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

The campaign of Gaspar G. Bacon, Republican candidate for governor, today was in a bad nose dive.

In their desperate attempt to discredit former Mayor James M. Curley, Democratic nominee, and to sidetrack the New Deal as the main issue, Bacon campaign managers succeeded in bringing down on their own heads the house of cards which they had built up so laboriously.

Relying on clever propaganda and twisting around of remarks made by James Roosevelt, son of the President, in introducing Curley and Senator David I. Walsh at the Worcester ratification, the Bacon forces staked pretty nearly their all on "selling" the public the idea that, while the younger Roosevelt personally wanted to see Curley governor, his father was interested only in the re-election of Walsh.

DODGE BIG ISSUE

Thus, they desired to subordinate the big issue and wipe out the sting of the anti-New Deal speech made by Bacon in Scarboro, Maine, while attempting to bring about the defeat of Governor Louis J. Brann.

But today little remains of this optimism, as a result of the Curley Springfield rally, where Roosevelt took occasion not only to put the administration solidly behind the Curley candidacy, but, through a telegram from James Farley, postmaster general and chairman of the Democratic national committee, to offer every assistance that the administration can give to make the Curley victory a decisive one.

MANY VOTES ALIENATED

Summed up in its entirety, the Bacon move served as a costly boomerang to his own candidacy, if talk on the street means anything, alienating from his banner many voters resentful of what they believe to be "tricky" tactics.

The Republican candidates, in addition to holding major rallies today in Salem, Saugus and Lynn, will attend or be represented at nine other gatherings. Among these will be a meeting under the auspices of the women's division of the Bacon-Haigis campaign committee at the Hotel Statler. Miss Eleonora Sears will be the guest of honor at this meeting. Tea will be served.

"Voltz" Search Jams Traffic

By Associated Press

Miami, Oct. 22—Elmer is not the only one many of the Legionnaires are looking for in these convention days.

Last night a group started searching for "Mr. Voltz" and looked under the hoods of automobiles at a downtown intersection, to such an advantage that the worst traffic snarl in the history of Miami resulted.

The Legionnaires removed the wiring systems of several automobiles while searching for "Mr. Voltz," thus stalling the motor cars. Service committee members unsnarled the jam after more than an hour's delay.

Captain Gozdiewski was taken to Brooks Hospital. Mohart, rescued from the water by other members of the crew, was reported slightly injured.

Football Mad in New York

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

New York took its World Series in football last Saturday. The Navy, Michigan, St. Mary's and Lafayette took charge of the big league baseball parks.

They ain't bad. But we still think the Cards' infield could beat them all.

When the college football boys want to get real rough they move into the baseball parks.

You've got to figure Medwick and Frisch in as All-American tackles for their work in that last game alone. They didn't carry the ball but they saw to it that no Detroit infielder did either.

About a couple of hundred thousand people saw the four games in Manhattan. Now, proud parents are figuring some method of having their boys go to college in Idaho and play football in New York.

"Motorists---Don't!"

Blanchard Gives Warning

Most Perilous Time of Year Is Beginning

Today the Boston Evening American publishes the second of a series on hazards and prevention methods in a drive to lessen the number of fatal accidents caused by careless driving. More than 30,000 persons met death in motor accidents in the United States, last year. This astounding figure nearly equals the total of American army battle deaths in the World War, 37,541.

THE PRESENT TOLL OF VICTIMS FROM AUTO ACCIDENTS IS A GREATER CHALLENGE THAN A "CRIME-WAVE"

"The present toll of victims from automobile accidents should be a greater challenge to every community than a 'crime-wave.'"

This was the warning of Lloyd A. Blanchard, executive secretary of the Governor's Committee on Street and Highway Safety as he offered 10 timely "Dont's" for motorists to a Boston Evening American reporter.

He pointed to the records as conclusive proof of the bad driving conditions that now face motorists, and declared:

BE SURE YOUR WINDSHIELD CLEANER IS WORKING!

"I have written to every chief-of-police in the State asking for more drastic action in the prevention of accidents.

"DONT'S" LISTED

"Here are ten 'DONT'S' that apply in particular to this time of year.

"First—Due to slippery roads and wet leaves, the motorist should make sure that all four of his brakes' 'bite' equally.

"Second—In slippery weather never put your foot on both the clutch and the brake at the same time. By doing this the traction of the rear wheels is lessened and increases the possibility of skidding.

MIST CAUSES PERIL

"Third—Be sure that your windshield wiper is working thoroughly.

"Fourth—In foggy weather, during early evening or later, use the white line in the center of the road as a driving guide.

"Fifth—Although normally, it is the front tires that require the most attention during 'skidding weather,' the motorist should be sure to have a good tread on his REAR tires.

"Six—With the period of daylight driving now nearing its shortest span there is crying need not only for a working tail-light, but one that can be seen for a good distance.

"Seven—Statistics show that most children are injured not while going to and from school but near their homes. It is, therefore, not enough for the motorist to slow down in school sections. He or she should be continually on the look-out for children in residential districts.

"Eight—Remember you can't blow a child off the streets with your horn.

"Nine—In stopping for traffic signals be sure to notice whether there is a patch of wet leaves before you.

"Ten—Slightly lower pressure in tires gives a greater traction on frost-wet roads."

value of wide organization in industry.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, anxious to hear her husband speak, and with a great deal to do, flew over to Williamsburg, then flew back to the White House to welcome guests. There is a lady that would make a good energetic President if we ever got around to lady-presidents. And she would continue the Roosevelt strain. Her father was the brother of Theodore Roosevelt, a fact that would interest Galton, expert in heredity, who proved that talent is inherited through the female line.

It is more important to clear up the Lindbergh kidnaping case than to "have the satisfaction of executing somebody for it." It is understood that "Jersey justice" expects an execution, and it may be in order, since many detectives are convinced of Hauptmann's guilt.

But other possibilities should have consideration and examination. Suppose the man Fisch, from whom Hauptmann says he got the ransom money really did the kidnaping and suppose Fisch, fearing the hue and cry, went to Germany, leaving money with Hauptmann sealed in a package or locked in a valise, with instructions to hold it unopened, until his, Fisch's return.

Fisch, it is known, left here after the kidnaping and died abroad, and Hauptmann had word of it. Suppose he then decided to open the package entrusted to him and appropriated the wealth found in it, not knowing of any connection between that money and the marked bills, and knowing Fisch's dubious character and prison record, what more likely than for him to spend the bills in his own neighborhood, boasting, as he did, that he had plenty more.

Hauptmann knew that the Lindbergh money was marked, every newspaper had announced it. Had he thought his treasure was the ransom money would he have spent it near home, as he did, instead of going to Canada, or elsewhere, where he could not be traced or identified, changing it for other money?

Unless Hauptmann is a complete moron, which appears not to be the case, would he have spent his criminal gains in a manner certain to lead to detection? Have detectives sent to Europe concentrated on Hauptmann too much and on Fisch not enough?

Colonel Lindbergh recalls a resemblance between Hauptmann's voice and that of the unseen man that received the ransom money. Hauptmann speaks with a German accent. Fisch also spoke with a German accent. Might it not be hard to distinguish with certainty between two such accents after a lapse of years?

If Hauptmann is the guilty man he should and will pay. But the important thing is to establish the facts.

When the "Jack the Ripper" murders occurred in London the murderer never being caught, Inspector Byrnes, forceful head of New York's police at that time, said to this writer, "If anything like that happened in New York we'd hang somebody."

A similar case did happen in New York, and as a compromise some half-demented creature went to the asylum for criminal insane.

The thing is not to "hang somebody," but to identify the actual criminal, dead or alive. By the way, Richard Harding Davis, then a reporter, wrote an excellent report of the sordid, shocking, slum-murder. The victim was known as "Old Shakespeare."

6 QUIZZED IN HAMMER DEATH

Rockport, Oct. 22—Search for the murderer of Mrs. Augusta Johnson, 55-year-old Pigeon Cove widow, who was killed by a hammer and left on the flaming floor of her bedroom nearly a year ago, received new impetus today when state detectives began questioning six persons here.

Beginning last week, when a hay shed was found to contain a hammer accepted by investigators as the murder weapon, and a bottle of fuel oil which they believe was used in igniting the bedroom, the trail grew steadily warmer until now authorities believe they are on the right track.

Hitler to Answer Reich Church Rebels Tomorrow

By Universal Service

Berlin, Oct. 22—Confronted with a definite schism in the German Protestant church, Chancellor Adolf Hitler will tackle the thorny problem tomorrow when he accepts the required oath of allegiance from Reichsbishop Mueller, against whom the rebels against the state church are aligned.

In face of this difficult issue, Hitler has deliberated more carefully than he did over the storm troopers' rebellion in June, but he has decided that the gauntlet thrown down by insurgent bishops and pastors can no longer be ignored.

In tomorrow's ceremony, the dictator is expected either to attempt to placate the rebels through a compromise proposal or to throw his full authority behind Mueller and his assistant chiefs of the Nazi church organization.

The defiant mood of the opposition was again displayed yesterday in popular places of worship throughout the country. In Munich 1500 dissenters marched to the palace of Bishop Meisser, who is still under arrest for his refusal to take orders from Nazi officials. They held an impromptu service.

After hymns and prayers, Bishop Meisser appeared on a balcony and thanked his followers for their loyalty and courage, concluding:

"Our faith will never be destroyed. Go home now, in peace and confidence."

In Berlin a crowd of 1000 entered the fashionable church of Jesus Christ and listened to Bishop Koch, another rebel leader.

Lights and Shadows

By

—George Holland—

Conflicting rumors seem to have had everybody in a quandary for a few hours about the projected debut of Marc Connelly as an actor. Mr. Connelly's footlight bow was to have occurred this evening in "The Farmer Takes a Wife," of which he also has the honor of being author with Frank Esler, and director. Now between frenzied phone calls and telegrams from the management, it seems that Mr. Connelly will NOT play the Herb Williams role. Mr. Williams returns to his original part and will remain in it when the production goes to New York next week.

Ethel Merman

Cole Porter, who is writing the words and music of "Anything Goes," the new musical comedy in which Vinton Freedley will present William Gaxton, Ethel Merman and Victor Moore at the Colonial November 5, broke his own record for speed last Tuesday when a sudden change in situation rendered useless one of the Porter songs originally scheduled for the show. Instead of considerably revising the lyric, which would have been necessary under the circumstances and which he is always reluctant to do, he decided to try a brand new idea that would fit the new plans exactly.

He made the decision at 11:15 a. m., and locking himself in one of the dressing rooms of the Alvin Theater, New York, where the show is rehearsing, Porter emerged triumphantly with the new song completed at precisely 12:58 p. m. That afternoon, Ethel Merman, for whose benefit the ditty had been dashed off, got busy on the number, and a little bird wired us that the song promises to be something that will be heard all around this town not later than Tuesday, November 6. At the risk of precipitating the end of a beautiful friendship, we'll whisper the title if you'll keep it under your chapeau until after the show opens. It's "Buddie, Beware!"

Katharine Cornell opens her New York season next month as Juliet, after a holiday in Europe. Brian Aherne, who seems to be pulling many of the plums out of the Hollywood pie and whose latest important role is with Helen Hayes in "What Every Woman Knows," will turn a deaf ear to all bids and come East to play Mercutio. Basil Rathbone will be Romeo. As the Nurse, Edith Evans comes from London. Twice before this distinguished English actress has appeared in America, in "The Lady With a Lamp," and "Evensong." Neither of these made much progress on Broadway, although they had chalked up records in the British capital. Miss Evans has recently closed a 14 months' engagement in London in "The Late Christopher Bean." For her part and in deference to her talents Miss Cornell has restored certain of the Nurse's scenes seldom acted in this country in the new version.

Francis Grover Cleveland, youngest son of the late ex-president Grover Cleveland, after weighing several picture offers, leaves today for New York to appear on the legitimate stage under the aegis of Leo Bulgakov. Cleveland, who with Ed Goodnow, made a real success of The Banrstormers, one of the multitudinous summer companies that either faded or flourished about New England, also headed The Stagers last season at the Peabody Playhouse. His last professional appearance was at the Bishop-Lee School of Dramatic Art yesterday, where he spoke to the boys and girls who are just starting up the long road to success in the theater.

Coming to the screen at the Metropolitan on Friday is a youngster named Josephine Hutchinson, who's bursting into the Hollywood limelight with such modest ballyhoo that it's twice as effective. Most playgoers remember the young lady as the perfect Teniel reproduction of Alice in Eva Le Gallienne's "Alice in Wonderland." What many have forgotten, if they ever knew it, is that Leona Roberts, who played the Red Queen in that production and the Nurse in Le Gallienne's "Romeo and Juliet," is Miss Hutchinson's mother. Incidentally, Miss Roberts is one of the greatest character actresses on the American stage.

Mary Pickford Plans to Publish Another Book; Grace Moore Seeks Stage Rights

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Oct. 22—Douglas Fairbanks will have to continue to plead hard if he is to have any luck in winning Mary Pickford back. He will find a dangerous rival in—her work. Mary's first book, "Why Not Try God?" is due on the market November 1. It's her own experiences on the road to right thinking.

Then in contrast to the first little book is a story, "The Demi-Widow," which will ebe published first in serial form and later as a novel. And here's something else about "The Demi-Widow." Grace Moore is so intrigued with the idea that she is discussing its possibilities as a play for herself. Mary's radio triumph, in addition to her literary success is keeping her busy and happy.

Louella O. Parsons

Winfield Sheehan has such faith in the future of the blonde Alice Faye that he plans to star her in "Nymph Errant" as soon as she finishes "The George White Scandals." "Nymph Errant," by Homey Brent, ran for 18 months in London and it was described to me by Diana Wynyard as being a great bet for the screen. Buddy Desylva, no less, is named as associate producer with Cole Porter, who wrote the music for the stage production, doing the same for the screen version.

"I don't know when I have heard any news that has pleased me as much as the word from London that Mack Sennett has been backed to the limit by English capital. He has formed the Mack Sennett Productions and will furnish for the British movie public a duplicate of the delightful comedies that so intrigued Americans a few years ago. Right on the heels of these good tidings is the publication of Gene Fowler's book, 'Father Goose' (Mack's biography) which is due on the marret October 25.

The Glenda Farrell-Robert Riskin heart attack is over. It was one of Hollywood's hottest romances while it lasted. Miss Farrell and the boy friend have definitely split, romantically speaking, although according to the lady's own word they are still good friends. Miss Farrell is also speaking to her New York merchant friend again.

Charles Furthman, Charlie Chaplin's good friend, has just written a mystery story that intrigues the interest of Edmund Lowe. Charlie, who knows his politics is calling his yarn "All Hell Broke Loose." His story was suggested by the recent Morro Castle tragedy and the Fox company is now reading it with a view to producing it with Lowe in the lead.

Snapshots of Hollywood

WILLIAM RHINELANDER STEWART, playboy of the east- and western world, is due in Hollywood tomorrow; you'd be surprised to see whom he hopes to see in Hollywood; and it isn't his ex-girl friend, VIRGINIA CHERRILL GRANT; NANCY CARROLL wearing a huge square cut diamond ring and acting as assistant hostess at the MRS. CLAIRE SMITH cocktail party; everyone says NANCY will marry WILLIAM VAN RENSSELAER SMITH, heir to the SMITH millions and son of the popular CLAIRE as soon as she gets her divorce from BOLTON MALLORY; she and MALLORY have been separated for over a year; SUE CAROL and HOWARD WILSON, very much that way about each other, at the SMITH party; ADELA ROGERS ST. JOHNS eating a huge plate of spaghetti with ENZO FIERMONTE and not worrying over her figure—she is that slender these days; ETHEL BORDEN, MGM scenario reader and member of the HARRIMAN family, in the hospital; COLIN CLIVE and wife, RUDY VALLEE, JULIAN ELTINGE and other interesting people patronizing a new cafe; the whole town at JUNIOR LAEMMLE'S cocktail party. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

'GayDivorcee' Draws Crowds

Having established new records for attendance, "The Gay Divorcee" is now in its second week at the Keith Memorial Theater.

Starring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, with Edward Everett Horton and Alice Brady in featured comedy roles, the picture has proved the hit of the new season, and has chalked up a high that exceeds "Little Women" and "The Count of Monte Cristo."

The picture introduces the "Continental," new dance sensation that is being taught nightly in the lounge of the Keith Memorial by Professor Louis Larner and his partner, Rita MacDonald. Lessons are given at 7 and 9 o'clock and are free to patrons.

'Monte Cristo' at Bowdoin

"The Count of Monte Cristo," film version of the classic by Alexandre Dumas, is the screen feature on the new program at the Bowdoin Square Theater. Robert Donat, newcomer to Hollywood, steps into the ranks of stars as the brave hero, and Elissa Landi has the role of the lovely Mercedes. The film has been lavishly produced.

The companion picture on the bill is "The Dragon Murder Case," in which Detective Philo Vance returns to the screen in another of S. S. Van Dine's thrilling murder cases. Warren William, Margaret Lindsay and Lyle Talbot head the cast.

A new low admission price of 25 cents for morning shows has gone into effect at Loew's Orpheum Theater. The price will be effective from the opening of the theater at 9:15 a. m., until 1 o'clock on weekdays, and until 2:30 p. m. on Sundays.

Lower prices for Sunday are also effective at Loew's State theater.

NIGHT LIGHTS and SIGHTS

by Manny Sherman

Eeenie, meenie, "Manny" mo, catch my comments as you go. Believe me boys and girls, there's aplenty these nights in the gay spots, so kick off those slippers, grab your playmate and merry-go-round where lights are lighter and nights are nightier. Let's peek into Bert Brennan's book and see what's paged for the American House Rathskeller. If you think you can spin (and I don't mean tops) there's 25 bucks for you if you can spin faster and longer than Harriet Shalek. Turn about is fair play, eh?

I'll string along with Eddie Peabody any time he strums his banjo strings. Than which there is no greater strummer in all America. Eddie is making a special trip to be the guest of Jacques Renard at Cocoanut Grove tomorrow night. Chalk that down as a "must" date.

Take a bow Boston American's Martha Lee. It's a tribute to your knowledge that the Grove asked you to recommend diets that could be served to ladies who wish to keep "the shape you love to clutch."

There is certainly an atmosphere of dignity and charm at the Hotel Vendome's Nippon Room, which opened last Thursday. The Oriental decorations are really captivating.

Strike up the Bond, here comes the navy. And what a crew of bottled in Bond sale-ers of good clothes. Led by Manager Herbie Davis, with Gene Hickey, Cy Renard and the other lads and their wives. Bond's clothing folks took over the Mayfair Tuesday night for a grand party. Loquacious Dick Solon did some ceremony mastering that must have made Archie Robbins envious and the fun flowed fast.

I've noticed that the Cascades is getting a big play from folks who drop in before the shows, as most theaters are just a step from this popular rendezvous atop the Bradford. The Sweetheart Bar is a sweetheart and the boys behind it know how to jiggle up the tongue-ticklers. Joe Rines, back to the scene of early triumphs.

Decorator Reuben Bodenhorn has done an eye-delighting job on the Westminster's new Blue Room, which makes a fitting setting for Billy Dooley and his orchestra. Here is something really artistic in a supper room, and with Coulon management you're sure of food that's O. K. from every angle. Aside to those who sent in suggestions for a new name. Thank lots . . . it showed that you read the column, eh what?

Have you leaned your elbows on the new cocktail bar at Steuben's on Boylston street? Of course, if you insist on trying some of the grand drinks, it's all right with the boys who zizz 'em up. Here's our suggestion, why not call it a "Snack" bar, the way they do in the swanky places in London, the ideah, old top is a bit of a bite with a sip about teatime.

Wait 'til you see the Brunswick Casino, which will open with a grand flourish on Wednesday evening, Oct. 31. I'm telling you far in advance because that date is important and so is the place. The dance floor will be the most spacious in town, there will be a unique cocktail terrace, a novel and elaborate bar and a charming lounge where you can sip before-dinner cocktails in front of an open hearth, and boy, if she doesn't get romantic in THAT setting, well you can figure that you don't have what it takes to make her thata waya. Larry Funk and his orchestra, "the band with a thousand melodies," will insure something that aces in music.

What a voice! What a girl! No wonder she was featured by Paul Whiteman. You'll find her now at Club Touraine. Zelda Castle, that's the star who's shining so brightly in this smart setting where Payson Raye does a beautiful dance job and Don Howard masters the ceremonies, masterfully and vocally.

Was there fun at the Rossmore opening last Monday night? I'm telling you there were big doings, with our next Governor, James M. Curley, turning the latch for the first time and gracing the occasion with some typical peerless oratory. Here is where Art Rubin and his troubadors tootle sweet toots and help to make the floor show a wow.

Ce ne que votre main madame? You'll hear that or something just as Francais when the Lafayette Hotel opens, probably on New Year's. H. Jacques Rousseau will be cuisine director, and the whole management will be French. Manager Winton Bee will have plenty of surprises in his floor show for the coming week. Popular prices on foods and no cover charge makes an evening here funfuly and inexpensive. "A Night in Paris" tags the floor show at the Brown Derby. It's a sportsy place to go any evening and the drinks are famous. "Let's Go to Rosebud Gardens" is a favorite line with many of the girls who like good dance music and good food. If you don't get a laugh out of Joe Rubin at the Metropolitan Rathskeller, you need several shots of laughing water.

Hinkey doo until next week.

DIVORCEE BRIDE SLAIN, FORMER HUSBAND HELD

By Universal Service

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 22—Mrs. Mable Krebbs Doyle, 30, comely divorcee bride of a prominent real estate man, was shot to death here. Her former husband, H. VV. Nielsen, 33, surrendered later and was held as the alleged slayer.

State's Attorney Bart Chamberlain said Nielsen allegedly killed his ex-wife as she lay in bed while her husband, P. J. Doyle, was trying to summon police to eject him from the house.

Mrs. Mary Etta Krebbs, mother of the slain women, received a minor bullet wound in the arm while struggling with Nielsen, police said.

He's Among the Favorites You Hear on the Air

Alexander Woollcott . . . The heavyweight champion of Phalanx . . . Which is in New Jersey . . . And where he was born . . . On January 19, 1887 . . . As "just another boy at the Woollcotts" . . . But such a boy as this one grew to be . . . Not only up and down . . . But sideways.

For 20 years Woollcott has been a commentator . . . Telling the world . . . Quite candidly . . . What he thinks of people . . . And books . . . And plays . . . And places . . . All over the universe . . . And telling it humanly . . . And interestingly.

Woollcott shrugged through Hamilton College . . . At Clinton, N. Y. . . . Took post-graduate work at Columbia . . . And then . . . In 1913 . . Went to work for the New York Times . . As dramatic critic . . . Holding the post for eight years . . . Then shifted to the New York Herald . . . And next to the World . . . But meanwhile enlisting in the A. E. F. . . . To get into the war . . . But not succeeding very well . . . Because his editorial gifts were utilized . . . Rather than any soldier blood he may have within him.

He is now author of the famous column . . . "Shouts and Murmurs" . . . In the New Yorker . . . And is "Town Crier" . . . On the air . . . Every Sunday at 9 p. m. . . . And Sunday morning host . . . At his famous celebrity breakfasts . . . At "Wit's End" . . . The Woollcott bachelor apartment . . . In a sun-filled apartment on Manhattan . . . Overlooking the East river.

Alexander Woollcott

His intimates . . . And his breakfast guests . . . Include the literary . . . And the artistic lights of two continents . . . And they all cherish the bounding Alexander's friendship . . . And revel in his abundant wit . . . And his gay spirit.

The soul of kindliness is Alexander . . . Although sometimes his humor is caustic . . . And he has traveled the world . . . To drink in life . . . With eyes and ears . . . And then write of it for others . . . Kiddingly . . . Lightly . . . But still tremendously effective . . . And there probably will never be another just like him.

McKenney Promoted

By order of the war department, Lieutenant Alfred E. McKenney of the Boston University R. O. T. C. instructional staff has been promoted to the rank of captain.

This Ear— —That Air

By N. F. T.

Loudspeaker patrons who are not now following the "Amos 'n' Andy" adventures are in my opinion missing the boys at their very best. Their "switcheashuns" at present are more true to life and everyday problems than ever.

That old 7 o'clock habit has caught hold again with me. If anyone makes inquiry, which hasn't happened in quite a while by the way, as to what program consistently reflects the hard to explain quality that actually holds and sustains interest to the point of creating suspense or sympathy every time out, my answer would be "Amos 'n' Andy" without a minute of hesitation. What a guy is that "Andy" for getting himself into the most involved circumstances! What a friend is the understanding "Amos" through it all.

FLEETING FLASHES

Of all the romantic world figures, international broadcasting bosses are extremely skiddish about attempting to relay any expression from the German ex-Kaiser, now exiled at Doorn . . . Mrs. Dwight L. Morrow, widow of the Senator who would have been the White House hope of the Republicans, had he lived, speaks across the country from Boston today (WEEI) to discuss Women's part in the new scheme of things. Meaning from 5 until 5:15 this afternoon . . . Somehow the comedy of Joe Penner doesn't appear to pack the wallop with kiddies that it did last year . . . Right now the witticisms of Alexander Wollcott send earcuppers scurrying for his Sunday night story telling . . . Station KWY of Chicago is being moved to Philadelphia . . . Wonder if Philly could consider one or more of ours perchance? . . . If that fellow and girl knew how much heartache and mournful downheartedness they have created by lighting those two cigarettes, they probably never would have gone outside in the dark . . . And there have been about enough radio apologies in song for Dixie diction. What's more, every native Southerner this one time mixer among them ever knew, didn't feel his territorial talk needed pardon begging.

Frank Munn, a full chested, two fisted man among men, has been racking his brain to hit upon some plan that will cause them to stop terming him "The Lavender and Old Lace tenor" when he broadcasts.

FACTS ABOUT FAVORITES

Edgar Guest, the human interest poet, who writes for this newspaper, when complimented upon being a radio star, invariably dispels the allegation by insisting he's "just a newspaper guy" and sincerely shuns fame . . . Ever so many requests ask about Henry Burbig, the dialect demon of early ether days. No word of him in hand for many months . . . Ted Husing has subdued his voice aplenty and sounds a lot more pleasing . . . Rudy Vallee still labors with a view to one day placing his neatly shod pedal extremeties beneath or on top of a desk where executive duties will be his to perform behind the scenes at Radio City or some other colossal sound sanctum base of operations . . . Joe Cook leaves his Monday night "House Party" place after November 12 . . . Joe jacks up to make ready for a new stage production in which he will be starred on Broadway . . . Dick Grant, erstwhile Yankee Networker hereabouts, didn't lose any time transferring his affections to the local WBZ-WBZA works, where his self-styled commentation now finds a place nightly. At least until election.

SOCIETY WILL ATTEND the benefit matinee of the Ballet Russe on Friday, November 16, which will swell the coffers of that worthy cause, The Christopher Shop, which keeps on steadily and quietly helping the handicapped war veterans each year . . . We can imagine no more delightful way to combine charity with pleasure than to attend this performance of the Monte Carlo dancers . . . especially the young folks.

MRS. ALVAN T. FULLER

Each year the roster of well-known names of women who are public-spirited and benevolent grows for the benefit of this popular annual event and this season we note such familiar names as Mrs. Francis Sears, Mrs. William T. Aldrich, Mrs. Thomas Motley, Mrs. James A. Nelson, Mrs. Henry S. Howes, Mrs. George E. Warren, Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs (who by the way is delighted with the announcement that her protege, Miss Ruth Poselt, violinist, will play with the Symphony orchestra later this season) . . .

Leaders on Committee

OTHERS ON THE LIST are Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, whose interest has enabled Miss Poselt to continue her studies abroad, Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, Mrs. Eliot Spalding, Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, Mrs. Robert Cushman, Mrs. Dana Osgood, Mrs. Mott Shaw, Mrs. B. H. Bristow-Draper, Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Mrs. Charles A. Proctor, Miss Martha Alford, Miss Lucy Lowell, Mrs. Benjamin F. Pitman.

The committee arranging the affair is headed by Mrs. Hobbs and Mrs. Ernst M. Parsons, assisted by Mrs. Howes, Mrs. Motley, Mrs. Nelson, Mrs. Cushman and Mrs. Huntington Hardwick. The program will include three new ballets which have not yet been seen in Boston.

Speaking of dancing reminds us of an exciting Saturday morning spent this week-end at the studio of Dana Sieveling, on Beacon Hill, watching the small members of Boston's artistic set take their first dancing steps . . . only the very young can really learn the art of terpsichore and it is with awe and wonder that we watch these youngsters dip and sway on the bars, limbering up for the more intricate balance and posture figures of the dance . . . Miss Sieveling is a rare artist and teaches each group herself, a perfect and marvelous example of what they are to become constantly before the aspiring children . . .

We glimpsed darling little Janet Gutterson, grand-daughter of Mrs. Malcolm B. French, one-two-threeing around the studio holding onto the hand of Robin Coburn, young hopeful of the William H. Coburns . . . Molly-O was there, too, her blond curls blowing out behind her as she leaped through the air . . . it is wonderful what progress in grace and posture just one season can make in a child. Perhaps we too will have our ballet someday in this home of culture.

Mrs. Albert C. Burrage to Entertain

THERE WILL BE MANY INTERESTING dinner parties preceding the opening of the Ballet Russe on Tuesday night, November 13 . . . Mrs. Albert C. Clark, Francis C. Carleton, Guido Perera, Horace Binney, William Dana Orcutt, William B. Pratt, Josiah H. Child, Lewis I. Prouty, Merrill Griswold, Henry B. Sawyer, Courtney Crocker, Robert W. Given in Marriage

—By Adele Garrison—

Mary joins the sonnet readers and there is a tense moment as Avis Arlen declares that Noel is really in love with her!

"I HOPE I don't intrude." Mary's voice was apparently flippant as she uttered the time-worn greeting of a certain type of masculine street lounger. But there was something quite different in her tone and manner. There was bewilderment, militant defiance and something deeper—a wound which I knew Mary would die rather than reveal.

"I'm sorry if I've crashed in on a private party," she said lightly, and so perfect was the control she now had of her voice that one would have sworn there was nothing but impish malice in it, "but I just couldn't sleep, so I thought I'd come down to the library and read for an hour or two. But I didn't dream of finding a soiree in session."

That was Noel of course. When anything has gone wrong between him and Mary he seems incapable of uttering any other word except her name. But he puts into that word volumes of protest, of entreaty and of tenderness.

MARY'S THREAT

Mary flung her head as if someone suddenly had jabbed her. Then she sent her fiance a mocking smile.

"That's my name, darling," she said. "I was going to add 'and I change it tomorrow.' But come to think of it, I don't change my first name, do I? only my last. And I'm not so sure the last few seconds that I'm even going to change the last one tomorrow."

I saw a gleam of triumph leap into Avis' greenish eyes, and felt the old urge to slap her face soundly tingle in my fingers.

"Mary!"

Noel's voice was hoarse with agony now, and as he repeated it again I saw Avis Arlen's eyes rest on him with fierce anger in them.

"Present and voting," Mary replied with a metallic little laugh. "But I want to find out what all the shooting's for. I'm sorry to have eavesdropped, but I really couldn't help it, you know. You weren't lowering your voices at all. In fact, I was almost upon the point of asking you to hire a hall—forgive the triteness of the phraseology; I'm not my usually brilliant self at this moment—when I heard my name."

She drew a deep breath, and then looked fixedly at Avis Arlen.

"I haven't the slightest concern in sashing over of your hectic emotional moments," she said, "but it isn't on the free list to drag my name into a public discussion. I am really surprised, Noel, at your permitting it. You usually are very chivalrous. I'm quite disappointed in you."

Avis chose the moment of all others to come to Noel's defense.

"Oh, you mustn't say those things about No-el!" she cooed sweetly, casting a languishing glance at Noel meanwhile. "He is the most chivalrous person I ever have known. If you don't want to marry him, as you said just now, why that's one thing. But you ought not to malign him just because—"

She stopped and simpered, and Mary, whose eyes were fairly black now with suppressed anger, spoke in low, repressed tones that should have warned a girl less obtuse than Avis.

"Will you kindly finish that please? 'Just because'—what?"

Avis simpered.

"I don't want to hurt your feelings. It isn't a particularly pleasant thing to say to a girl who was to have been married tomorrow."

"Don't be too premature in mixing your tenses," Mary said silkily. "And please don't consider my feelings in the least. Finish that sentence."

NOEL DENOUNCES AVIS

The last words were like the crack of a whip, and Avis involuntarily flinched. But she obeyed. There was nothing else for her to do, with Mary's voice pitched to the timber it was.

"Just because he cares more for someone else," she said defiantly.

I saw Noel open his mouth to protest, then close it again. And I approved his wisdom. For the moment, there was nothing in the room save Mary's blazing, dominant face and voice.

"Meaning by someone else—perhaps yourself, his Lady of the Sonnets?" Mary purred.

"Oh, how beautifully you put it!" Avis exclaimed emotionally. "Yes, I do mean myself. He did care more for me last summer, and I am sure he would now, only that you have—"

Mary had no chance to reply. Noel sprang past her with a cry of rage and faced Avis Arlen with clenched fists that I knew he was restraining only with a mighty effort.

"You rotten little liar," he said. "If you utter another word of this, I'll throw you out of this house if it's the last thing I ever do."

ADVICE ON DYEING THE TOPKNOT; CHOOSE OWN NATURAL COLOR

Lady, Take a Bow in Any Silhouette

By Prunella Wood

THERE are a lot of evening gowns about which are eminently suitable for the young matron but which are especially young in effect for all their family and importance. Three of them are sketched below, in three very different types. Do you like to be non-touchable, but very, very provocative? The black velvet model shown will take you a long way then, especially if your hair is in a bang and you use some pastel flower perfume instead of something headier.

ARE you the tangy type who looks too severe in a princess gown and sort of engulfed in a bouffant model? Try the skillfully broken lines of the Vionnet pictured which seems to enhance long lines while it really divides them graciously.

AND if you are the outdoor sweater-and-skirt kind of woman who would like to attend dances in shirt and jodhpurs if you had the nerve, a robe de style, similar to the one shown below, will turn you out looking formal in spite of your sulks and you'll have no train or annoying trick decolletage to plague you during the evening.

Have Expert Work Done First

By Juliet Shelby

HAIR dyeing is an art that takes skill and long practice to acquire. So when you finally decide to have your hair dyed, avoid risk by entrusting your head to one who is well experienced. Remember it is your hair and, unless you shave it off, you will have to live with it for years to come!

All hair dyeing is done at your own risk. Especially that which you do yourself, so you should be extremely cautious in choosing a dye and very careful to follow the instructions that come with it.

My advice to any woman who has decided to touch up her hair is to have the dye applied by an experienced operator. Later, when one is more familiar with the dye, the manner in which her hair reacts to it, she may possibly be able to apply the treatment to herself.

I cannot blame you for deciding to color your hair if it is streaked or prematurely gray, and I can guide you on how to go about it.

In choosing a shade, get it as near to your natural hair coloring as possible. Do not come out a redhead if you were once a brunette, or a blonde if you were once a mousy brown.

I tell you this because your skin coloring and eye coloring were created to harmonize with the shade of hair with which you were born. You can't dye your skin or eyes to match any new hair shade you fancy! The hard look which dyed hair so often gives a woman is usually caused by her failure to match her natural hair shade with a dye.

The operator should be intelligent about your particular desires, so make him examine your hair properly and give you suggestions that carry confidence! You should leave him feeling assured that only the most discerning friend could tell that you had had your hair dyed!

If you are interested in knowing the name of this hair dyeing method, call Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000. If you prefer writing for this information send a stamped self-addressed envelope to Juliet Shelby, Boston Evening American, Boston.

Greetings When Ladies Meet

By Mrs. Beeckman

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I attended a surprise party today and I noticed one of the ladies there, whenever someone was being introduced to her, she arose from her chair and said "Pleased to meet you." I think ladies being introduced to ladies remain seated and just say "How do you do" and that men to men rise, shake hands and say "How do you do?" Will you please let me know what is the correct thing to do? B.

You are right—when women of about the same age are being introduced to each other, they do not rise but merely bow, and say graciously, "How do you do." Men being introduced to each other rise, shake hands, and say, "How do you do." It is not correct to say "Pleased to meet you" when we acknowledge an introduction. "How do you do" is the proper phrase to use.

Will you please tell me which is the proper way to eat from a spoon . . . from the side or tip of the spoon? G.

We should eat from the side of a spoon.

Bridge Pilfering Teaches No-Defense Lesson

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Most stories about highway robbery at Bridge involve some extremely clever false-card or psychic finesse which could be read by no one short of a mind reader. Like the clever robberies in life, these master crimes are perhaps more interesting than representative. A good deal of the robbing in Bridge, as in life, is pilfering, and is due more to the carelessness of the robbed than to the subtlety of the robber.

Indeed, much of it is hardly robbery at all, but merely accepting gifts. On today's hand East and West appeared to make every effort to present South with his contract. It is not surprising, therefore, that South made his game, even though from a double dummy perusal of all four hands that would seem almost impossible.

North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

North: ♠ A K 10 ♡ K 10 3 ♢ A Q 7 5 4 ♣ 7 4
West: ♠ 7 5 ♡ A ♢ K J 9 6 2 ♣ K Q J 8 5
East: ♠ 9 8 6 4 2 ♡ Q 5 2 ♢ 10 3 ♣ A 3 2
South: ♠ Q J 3 ♡ J 9 8 7 6 4 ♢ 8 ♣ 10 9 6

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♢	Pass	1 ♡	2 ♣
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡ (1)	Pass
Pass	Pass

(1) Definitely a slight overbid, since South could not have been severely criticized for passing to one diamond in the first place. However, South chose to read his partner's double raise over the intervening overcall as practically forcing.

West quite naturally opened the King of clubs and East started to signal with the three-spot. South made the most blatant false-card possible. He dropped the ten-spot.

Deciding for some peculiar reason that a second club trick, if it existed, would wait, West now shifted to diamonds, hoping that if the declarer had two of the suit it might be possible to give East a second round ruff. The Jack of diamonds was led, the Ace in dummy went up, and the next lead was a small diamond, which South ruffed in his own hand.

Declarer now led the Jack of spades over to dummy's King and trumped another diamond in his hand. At this point East made the very bad error of discarding the club deuce. It would seem as though East were deliberately paving the way for the declarer's subsequent end-play.

South now re-entered dummy with the spade ten and trumped still another diamond. East this time discarding a spade. The declarer now led out his third good spade and West now failed to trump with the singleton Ace of hearts, feeling that he did not want to sacrifice this top card without at least getting two opposing trumps for it.

Declarer now led a trump and West perforce won with the blank ace. He had nothing left now to lead but clubs, and East, due to his atrocious choice of discards, now found himself effectually end-played. East, of course, was forced to win the club trick with his blank ace, and had to lead away from his heart queen to the declarer's king-ten. Thus the contract of four-odd was fulfilled.

Tomorrow's Hand

This hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Maple Sugar Flavors Custard

By MARTHA LEE

(From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB)

MAPLE SUGAR, in both the syrup and the solid form, is another New England tradition which has been handed down to us for generations. At present last spring's supply is available at moderate prices, under the label names that we are all familiar with.

Doesn't it bring a picture of steaming pancakes, stacked high with the rich-colored clear sauce oozing out and down the sides? This is the familiar way of using the syrup on pancakes, waffles and ice cream, but maple syrup can be used in many foods to vary the flavor and add appeal.

In making frosting—either uncooked or cooked—the addition of a few tablespoons of maple syrup will give a delightful variation of flavor. Put a tablespoon in the bottom of a custard cup before adding the custard mixture. The flavor will permeate the whole and when the custard is turned out it will form a sauce. Or pour it over ham before baking it in the oven.

MAPLE BISCUITS

2 cups sifted flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
3½ tablespoons butter or other shortening
⅔ cup milk
3 tablespoons pure maple syrup

Sift flour, measure, sift twice with baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening; lightly work in milk and maple syrup. Toss on floured board and knead slightly. Pat to about ¾-inch thickness. Cut with floured biscuit cutter. Before placing in oven brush surface of biscuits with melted butter. Bake in a hot oven (450 deg. F.) for 12 minutes.

MAPLE PIE

4 tablespoons sugar
⅓ cup cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
1¼ cups milk
1¼ cups maple syrup
4 tablespoons butter
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 baked 9-inch pie shell
2 egg whites
4 tablespoons sugar.

Sift sugar, cornstarch and salt together, and add ½ cup milk. Scald remaining milk in double boiler, add cornstarch mixture, and cook until it begins to thicken, stirring constantly. Add syrup and butter, and continue cooking and stirring until thickened. Cook 10 minutes longer, stirring occasionally. Pour small amount of syrup mixture over egg yolks, stirring vigorously. Return to double boiler and cook until thickened. Remove from fire; add vanilla. Cool. Pour into pie shell. Beat egg whites until foamy throughout. Add sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, beating after each addition until sugar is thoroughly blended. After all sugar is added continue beating until mixture will stand in peaks. Pile lightly on filling. Bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) 15 minutes.

Exercise For Sagging Chin

Question: Will you help me by prescribing an exercise for a sagging chin? J. F. C.

Answer: A good exercise for your sagging chin is as follows: tilt the head back (but not so far as to strain the cords of the throat), open the mouth wide. Then slowly, with perfect control, like a slow motion moving picture, close your mouth by pulling up the lower jaw. Remember to give your throat the same treatment as you give your face and let the nourishing cream stay on overnight.

When the eminent financiers of the American Bankers Association now holding forth in Washington learned that Tom K. A banker [illegible]

[illegible] Smith is the president of the famous old Boatmen's National Bank of St. Louis. Another reason, perhaps a more compelling one, why he is to be elevated to high rank among the American bankers is that until six months ago he was down here in Washington [illegible] Henry Morgenthau, Jr., the banker [illegible] of the Treasury. Henry and Tom are great friends. Tom knows his way [illegible] takes up its new banking laws.

So maybe that's partly the reason why these honors are to be heaped on the eminent custodian of the combined wealth of Dizzy and Daffy.

This Is Life

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Is there any joy like that vouchsafed to an English teacher in an engineering school when he beholds [illegible] a [illegible] successful man of letters? A brand plucked from the burning? He realizes, of course, that he was not entirely responsible for [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] a really [illegible] professor of applied mechanics [illegible] thoughts to literature quite as well as an English teacher can.

Robert E. Rogers

Well, anyway, I have a couple of boys on "Fortune," one a historian of aviation and power [illegible] an expert [illegible]. And now here comes a biographer, former M. I. T. [illegible] graduate [illegible] Hollywood, [illegible] and amateur of the records of Broadway in the past generation. His name is Parker Morell, author of the new book "Diamond Jim Brady" (Simon Shuster) some chapters of which, I believe, have been published in the Cosmopolitan.

Even if I were not personally interested, I still should have gone into chuckles and whoops at the richness of this vivid record of the gargantuan and unbelievable James Buchanan who had 30 complete sets of precious and semi-precious [illegible] es and sometimes changed them twice a day; who ate steadily and consistently as if he were winning a wager against a country champion who was a champion [illegible] thrift in those gorgeous days when [illegible] and coal and oil and machinery were creating millionaires overnight, most of whom tried to vie with Bet-a-million Gates and the enormous Brady himself; whose stomach was six times the average size; who never tasted liquor of any sort but liked about two gallons of orange juice at a meal, and all food in proportion.

Parker Morell had a difficult job. It is reasonably easy to write a biography of a man safely dead who left letters, memoranda, speeches and confidential documents behind him. But a man who left no records behind him, whose memory is in the [illegible] of hundreds of aging people whose memories are not entirely untrustworthy—that is another matter.

From a hundred reminiscences Mr. Morell put this gorgeous and hilarious story together. There was the mystery of how Brady assembled his diamonds and their value and what became of them, which Mr. Morell through his inside knowledge of the business was able to find out from the man who knew all about it.

From a famous French restaurateur whom Brady patronized he got the incredible details of his gormandizing. For the rest, the public prints of the period were full of the stunts which this cleverest of advertisers invented partly for sheer love of the sensational and luxurious partly as good advertising for his business as salesman for railroad supplies. His parties offered to the "new millionaires" of enormous wealth and mining camp tastes rivalled those legendary orgies of Stanford White in extravagant sensualism.

His public stunts were the most interesting. It was he who drove the first horseless carriage in New York up and down Fifth avenue to a wet rendezvous at Holland House, from which he gave "rides" to politicians and magnates and men-about-town all day long. This was in 1895. When the bicycle craze came in he took to it avidly—though he prudently had a servant to do the hard pedalling, while he sat in the front seat of the tandem. His most bizarre inspiration was his tri-tandem machine, on which he wheeled Lillian Russell about sandwiched between himself and the motive power. And to Lillian he gave that marvelous wheel, gold plated, with mother of pearl handles and studded with diamonds, rubies and sapphires, which she carried about in a blue velvet case. Brady, with his lady friend, and Lillian with her gentleman friend, formed an inseparable foursome until Brady's girl eloped with Lillian's man and broke Brady's heart. Miss Russell survived.

He had courage, that man. In the depression years before the anxious presidential campaign of 1896, when all the financial interests were retrenching, scared to death, Jim took a long shot on Prosperity. He turned all his holdings, $139,000 into cash and determined to spend every cent of it on "good will" against the coming boom. After Bryan was defeated and the boom came, Brady cashed in handsomely. He built a house on Fifth avenue, at 86th street which all but surpassed Senator Clarke's famous pile of eccentric luxury. Anonymously—for once in his life—he bought and raced a famous string of horses. One dinner of celebration cost him one hundred thousand dollars.

He was born in 1856 and died at 61 in 1917. His last years were years of stomach and kidney illnesses, the natural result of his terrific way of living. He liked his doctors and helped them all he might. Before he died he had founded the James Buchanan Brady Urological Institute, the first of its kind in the United States, the third in the world. Before he died he burned up records of loans and notes totalling a quarter of a million so as not to make trouble for those who survived him.

He died at about the end of his era, the "lobster era" as Morell calls it, and the beginning of the dance era. The lives of even millionaires have been more simple since, less expensive, and certainly healthier. Diamond Jim was the last of his kind, and Morell has written a marvelous book about him.

Mystery Runaway in Court Today

BOY ACCUSED OF AUTO THEFT

Brockton, Oct. 22—Edward B. Perry, 16-year-old runaway, who for five weeks defied efforts of Plymouth police to learn his identity in order to avoid casting shame upon his parents, today faced charges of stealing an auto.

At the trial in superior court here, will be his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Perry, who were reunited with their son in a tearful meeting at the [illegible] County house of correction.

Mrs. Perry, a gray-haired little woman who has lost 30 pounds since her boy disappeared from his home at [illegible], Me., on September 9, found the boy through a newspaper account of the "mystery boy."

When arrested, the youth said his name was John Harrison, and that he came from Trenton, N. J. When Trenton police reported they had never heard of him he refused to disclose his identity as, he said he did not wish to drag the family name into his troubles.

Young Perry was held for larceny of an auto. When captured September 10 at Wareham, he attempted to escape by brandishing an unloaded and obsolete revolver, police said.

The boy had never been in any difficulties before, said Mrs. Perry.

Mrs. Perry fainted twice when she saw her son in the library of the jail.

District Attorney Edmund Dewing said the case would be disposed of today. The parents were hopeful he would be allowed to return home in their custody.

'BREAK-DOWN' BANK HEADS ATTACKED BY FORD

HENRY FORD AT SUDBURY

Ford Shakes Up Bankers; Auto Maker Hits NRA

Banks which assist in the general movement to "get something for nothing" are one of the reasons for the delay in business recovery, Henry Ford believes.

Paying a flying visit to the Wayside Inn at Sudbury which he bought and restored several years ago the motor magnate took time to emphasize his views upon "break-down" banks. He said:

"You know there are two kinds of banks—the build-up kind and the break-down kind. It's the break-down bank that's now in operation in this country.

MORGAN PRAISED

"Morgan is a banker of the build-up kind. When he loans money he wants security for it while the break-down bank passes out money on anything, and in the end the people are holding the bag."

The New Deal's alphabetical projects meet with little sympathy from the Detroit motor millionaire. His principal objection was that they interrupted a "back-to-the farm" movement.

"There's too much Santa Claus—all this CWA, NRA, FERA business that is going on. But they're easing off on it, which may be considered a sign that general business is getting better.

"I'm certainly not in sympathy with the CWA, the NRA, the FERA. I think it did more harm than good. It certainly spoiled a big farm movement that was underway.

REMAIN IN CITIES

"You know, there are many men in the cities who are farmers and good farmers. There was a movement on foot to get these people back to the farms, to till the soil. Along comes CWA and FERA to support them.

"So the movement collapsed. They stayed in the cities instead of going back to the farms.

"There are getting to be a lot of softies in this country, because of this—afraid of hard work."

The motor magnate referred to a home loan in what he called excessive amount upon property of what he believed questionable value as an example of getting something for nothing. He said:

"That's what I mean; people will never go back to work as as you hand money to them on a platter."

Threats against the Ford family have become so commonplace a matter in Ford's life that they no longer worry him greatly.

STOLEN 'SMOKE' IN CAR DENIED

With 16-year-old Barbara Baier its center, a Brookline High School controversy promises to furnish stirring meetings of the school committee in that town in the near future.

Miss Baier, daughter of Mrs. Grayce Baier of Washington street, Brookline, was one of four girls suspended after they had been found seated in a parked automobile at the time one of the girls was said to be smoking.

Her suspension brought protest from her mother and final admittance from school authorities that the girl had not been smoking but had broken the rules by sitting in the car, according to her mother.

In a letter to the school department, Mrs. Baier charged that her daughter had been re-admitted but with restrictions that forbade her a chance to make up work that she had lost during the suspension. The girl was issued a blue slip that ordinarily grants permission to make up work lost. Before the printed word "permission" the word "no" had been inserted over the printed signature of Wilfred H. Ringer, headmaster.

Got Tongue Lashing, Mother Charges

Mrs. Baier further charged in the letter thaat she had been subjected to "tongue-lashing" from the headmaster and asked that an investigation be made of the entire suspension system in the school.

Headmaster Ringer, in a letter to the girl's mother, said the suspension was necessary because of alleged failure to obey rules.

Girls Will Be Girls ---For a Pal

10-YEAR-OLD MISS SEEKS EXPERTS' AID FOR PET

They say that a dog is a boy's pet—that little girls do not care for them.

Well, if you had been at the Animal Rescue League today, or if you had talked to Florence Sweeten, of 19 Ellery street, South Boston, you certainly would know better.

Ten-year-old Alma Meritz came all the way from Westwood to the Rescue League's offices with her big German shepherd, Fritz to learn how to care for him properly.

Alma has really owned Fritz for only a few weeks but she has played with him since he was a puppy. He belonged to Mrs. John Webster, of 43 Woodlawn street, Dedham, a neighbor of Alma's before she moved.

When it came time for Alma to go to Westwood, Fritz would not stay behind, so Mrs. Webster presented him to her. That's why Alma came to Boston to learn how to care for him.

In South Boston at the same time, the little Sweeten girl was looking for her toy Boston terrier, Wee Wee. He's been missing for two days and she is disconsolate.

Her mother hopes that any person who may see the dog will return him, because he is such good company for her little girl while the mother goes to work.

'A GIRL'S' BEST FRIEND IS HER DOG

Alma Moritz, 10, above, of Westwood, "thinks the world" of her big German shepherd dog, Fritz. To make certain that Fritz is getting the best of care, Alma journeyed intown to Animal Rescue League headquarters, to discuss the latest in "dogology" with the experts there. Fritz was given to Alma because he followed her from Dedham to Westwood and in dog language, Fritz is making plain that he would go to the end of the earth for Alma. DAY BY DAY

New York, Oct. 22—In the manner of Arnold Bennett's journals: Depot breakfast. Shoe shine afterward [illegible] sidewalk [illegible] Rex [illegible] by puffing a [illegible] paper [illegible]. Dusting up for a [illegible] excursion. A [illegible] from [illegible] Paris [illegible] for a [illegible] Rivera [illegible]. [illegible] introductions of [illegible].

O. O. McIntyre

In a chance bakery I bought some [illegible] bread, the [illegible] pink blue and the poisonous green of wall paper. [illegible] Rex Cole told me today that in five years no American housewife would be washing dishes. A [illegible] [illegible]. Sticky mistral up from the harbor at noon.

After careering in the park for ideas I had an immense burst of energy at my typewriter. Everybody hippy-pippy about the city's terrific tax [illegible] and the Lord Mayor must exercise caution to save his political scalp. We found [illegible] chandeliers out of a Mantes chateau for the Ohio house. Cheap, too.

Clay Morgan told me the purser Henry Villar is to be articled on the big new liner Normandie. Trans-Atlantic pursers have definite followings. Like cinema stars. Villar's is large as any I know. An exquisite with St. Bernard eyes. I found $10 in an old coat last night. Magnificent experience.

Few vivid opera singers today. Vide: Geraldine Farrar, Garden, Schumann-Heink, Caruso. Lily Pons's voice is tingling. So is Grace Moore's. But neither has over-plus of the neuter dazzle called "it". Opera needs another Otto Kahn. John T. McCutcheon writes to know about my boyhood skunk trapping experiences and an amusing postcard from Corey Ford from Alaska. I want to see Nome. And a Red Dog roarin' saloon that Service poetizes. With Lady Lous and card sharpers.

The check of strangers who ask writers to read their manuscripts as a favor. Criticizing a manuscript is a week's work. Peggy Joyce, extravagantly chinchillaed, was going by when I went out last evening. The starter: "She's purty as a speckled pup all right." I added: "But not as cute." Also a block north I passed the sad-eyed Libby Holman girl. Irvin Cobb, back from Hollywood, is astonishingly content with his new residence and new career.

M. and I fell into talk how names beglamoured. Such as Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, Carole Lombard, Bulwer-Lytton, George Broadhurst, Olga Petrova and Jo Davidson. She wondered if Pavlowa billed Maggie McSwatt would have risen to greatness. I said "No." There was lively debate. Worsted, as is customary, I pouted around a full hour and slammed two doors.

Pavlowa

I cannot believe increasing rumors that Maurice Chevalier has been poking fun at America from the French stage. Six weeks now and no ringing of the telephone. The switchboard takes names and numbers and I call back at leisure. Astonishing relief. Not many calls important. While working, each disturbing J., over from London, says Noel Coward has saved $500,000 in British bonds. I imagined more. Arliss is reputedly worth three-quarters of a million. At the Cobbies I watched William Randolph Hearst on one side the wireless and Vincent Astor on the other listening to a recent broadcast of the President. Neither changed expression. I wondered their thoughts.

Bernard Baruch, reared in the South Carolina low country, told me he was 11 before he knew there was white sugar. He thought it all brown. I think his autobiography, from off hand remarks, will be mightily revealing. A tolerant, modest man with gusto for citizenship. I like him. A strange sight in a West 57th street gallery. A beauteous Madge Evans sort of girl explaining paintings to a prematurely white-haired blind man. He wore four hero decorations. I saw the Sing Sing Warden Lawes on the avenue. He reads Spencer, Epictetus and Marcus Aurelius for equanimity, electrocution nights. Most reporters get blind drunk.

Stanley Walker's "City Editor" book will especially interest journalists. He has a sweeping straightaway writing form. A snake charmer, resembling Irene Bordoni, a caller today. Spanish accent and confessed love for Clark Gable, whom she never met. She has written a novel. I sent her to Verne Porter. Explained he was susceptible to coquetry, which he isn't. Ten messages to call Porter. I hope he was vamped.

Starves to Death

Brockton, Oct. 22—Starvation and exposure was believed to have caused the death of Robert Conroy, 73, partially blind inmate of the city infirmary here, who had been missing since September 27. His body was found by two mushroom pickers in the woods off Hammond street. One of his feet was wedged between two heavy rocks.

Q. and A. DEPARTMENT

Dear Madame Aunt Bella:

As I see it, this great period of crisis, complicated as it is by reckless governmental experiments and attempts at regimentation of the body politic, et al., will be worth the cost to future generations if the American people but learn at last, once and for all, that—in the final analysis—they must stand on their own feet!

Rain of Earlier Weeks Camouflaged Holy Cross Passing Attack Saturday ↕ Virginia Makes Rules Discovery; Kiernan's Surprise Touchdown

By AUSTEN LAKE

AFTER EXAMINING THE EVIDENCE, I submit that the rain which drowned out the four preceding football Saturdays contributed to Holy Cross' one sided score against Harvard.

Austen Lake

This is a quaint idea! Yet, during the four previous Holy Cross games, Harvard's scouts sat upstage at Fitton Field, Worcester, and jotted notes of what they saw.

What they saw, perforce, was a dull diet of ground maneuvers and running plays, simply because the ball was slippery as an unshucked oyster, and Jim Hobin, even with his wide finger spread, could not grip it, much less toss those airline passes that travel straight as a goose going South.

So, in the file of data which Eddie Casey and his staff received on the Purple before Saturday, there was no hint that Hobin, known chiefly as a hard blocking interferer and an average punter, would turn into a composite of Swede Oberlander, Chris Cagle and Harry Newman.

Casey, logically, set his secondary defense close to stop running thrusts. So, when Hobin started his long range shelling in the fourth quarter, it was too late to reorganize. Yet Harvard, losing 26-6, was estimated 20 per cent better than against Brown, which it defeated 13 0.

HOBIN'S BASEBALL PASSES, thrown with the speed and accuracy of a major league shortstop, would make a great football team out of an average one. The secret of Dartmouth's 1925 intercollegiate championship was due to Oberlander's ability to throw a football through a rolling hoop at 25 yards.

I've often thought what a simple matter it would be for a coach to give a likely lad a football during his freshman term and let him spend his spare time during the year blazing away at gymnasium targets until he could hit a sparrow in the eye.

By his second or third year, such a boy would be as useful as a paid up insurance policy, and the best and easiest means of gaining football yardage

Charley Brickley, greatest toe-kicker in history, learned to kick that way, passing his 12 months of the calendar tunking a football until he could drop it in a bushel basket while at full gallop.

BOYS DON'T MESS AROUND WITH football between seasons any more, and coaches, satisfied to greet the end of a fall while still sane, seldom encourage them. Yet the best combination drop kicker and passer that I ever saw, on or off the varsity field, was a hunch-backed lad with a wry neck, who weighed a scant 135 pounds.

The boy, then a sophomore at Lafayette, could not risk the body contacts of the football field, but he could sharpshoot a football with his toe and hand like a marine marksman could snipe with a service rifle

I have heard Tack Hardwick, one of Harvard's football immortals, tell how he used to fondle a football while he studied his lessons until he could almost palm it. And, nightly, before going to bed, he would school his kicking toe, by swinging it along the edge of an opened closet door, so as to graze the door and acquire the "kicking groove."

APPARENTLY FOOTBALL RULES are one thing in one section and another elsewhere During Virginia's visit to Dartmouth, the team repeatedly used a "screened pass," in which the five center men of the line would go down the field with the receivers in violation of the intercollegiate rules.

When the play was penalized, the Virginia captain, a tall, pleasant youth who was playing despite a dislocated collar bone explained that the Southern conference permitted this play, and he couldn't understand why Northern officials banned it. The latter, somewhat flabbergasted, replied simply that it was in the book.

As a matter of fact other regions of the country apply rules differently. In the Middle West defensive tackles are permitted to knock down and sit on offensive ends who are suspected of going down the field to receive passes

I HAVE NEVER SEEN COLLEGE backs carry the ball more loosely than this season, a matter that may trace to the smaller girth of the new football and the fact that it may be gripped with greater ease.

At Dartmouth Saturday, at Harvard's Stadium the preceding week, and Holy Cross before that, backs repeatedly went into the line or around the ends with ball balanced at the curve of a wrist, as a kitchen maid carries a loaf of bread. Still, fumbles are rare.

One of these loose-leaf fumbles occurred when a Dartmouth halfback, Nairne, was tackled on Virginia's 15-yard line, and the ball was jostled out of his grasp. For an instant it bounced crazily along the turf, until Joe Kiernan, a sub fullback, picked it up.

Confused by the complicated fumble rules, Kiernan stood for a moment, looking a little sheepish. The Virginia players stood, too, until finally Kiernan decided, well, maybe it would be all right if he experimented.

So, gingerly, at a dog trot, he moved across the goal line. Even there, he felt something was wrong. So he carried the ball out on the field again, intending to give himself up. To his amazement he found that he had scored a touchdown. And the expression on his face was that of a man who had just won an Irish sweepstake prize.

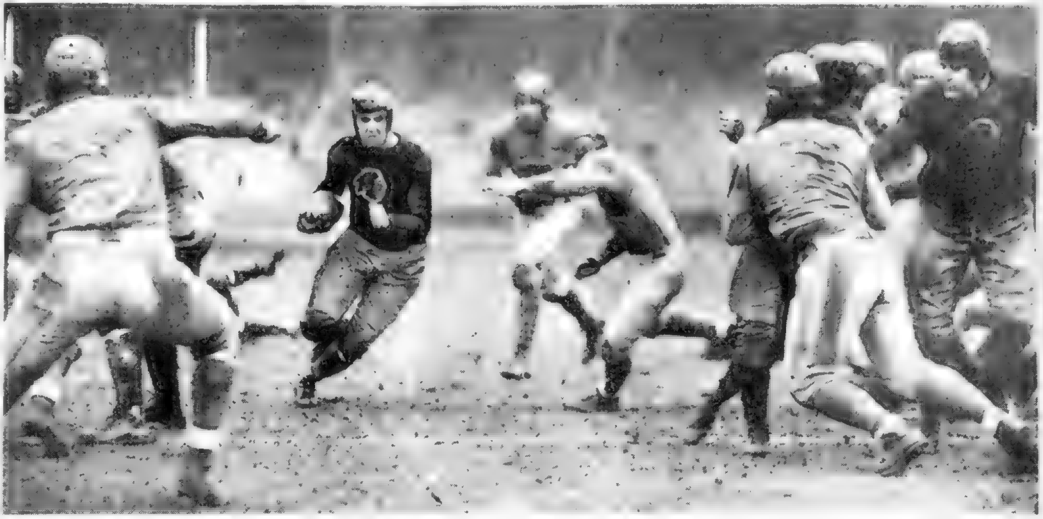
IT WAS AN EXAMPLE OF the hazy understanding that even the players have of the fumble, since the time that the rules committee, three years ago, "killed" a fumbled ball at the spot where it is recovered by a defensive team player.

Fumbles recovered by players of the side which put the ball in play may be run, as was the case with Kiernan's.

Yet the whole question is scrambled up in most players' minds.

Redskins Tomahawk Path Through Eagle Line for Rush of Ace Ball Carrier



Hank McPhail, hard riding Redskin back, is shown pouring through a gaping hole in the Philadelphia line at Fenway Park, but it was nigh-perfect interference which opened the path for him. The forward wall of the Redskins laid low the handicaps in McPhail's path, and he raced over for a first down in the second period. The Redskins won on a touchdown by Cliff Battles in the third period. As a result, they are only one game behind the New York Giants in the Eastern Division. Redskins Pluck Eagles Despite Whistles

By Joe Cashman

There may be something to the allegations that pro football officials are lax in enforcing the rules in other cities around the circuit, but the gentlemen who blow the whistles in the Redskins' home games can never be indicted on that charge.

The quartet appointed to work the Sabbath battle between the Dietz delegates and the Eagles [illegible] from Philadelphia [illegible] in its efforts to turn the [illegible] into an official [illegible] for nobody.

In the end, however, the Redskins prevailed 6 to 0, Cliff Battles going over for a touchdown late in the third period, which, he may be interested to know, was just in time to save Boss George Marshall from leaping out of his private roof box to the slimy turf below.

Mind you, this is not a criticism of the officials. They erred not once in dealing out the numerous drastic penalties which featured the struggle.

It just happened that to keep faith with themselves they had to nullify two Boston touchdowns and stop march after march by both clubs with penalties so [illegible] looked [illegible] as though the only [illegible] the crowd of 7000 would carry home would be the shrill of whistles.

Most of them present had forgotten if they ever knew some of the infractions [illegible].

Two backs in motion cost the Redskins one touchdown. A forward touching two eligible receivers was another heavy blow to the natives. Only six men on the scrimmage line threw a monkey wrench into an impressive Eagle flight.

This game was supposed to be a grudge battle. The pre-game ballyhoo pictured the Eagles having a burning desire to win by fair means or foul to prove that the Boston management made a mistake in letting Coach Lud Wray, South Boston George Kenneally and others go to the City of Brotherly Love.

Actually, it was one of the cleanest tussles ever staged on Fenway turf. The only evidence of the bad blood supposed to exist between these rivals was a minor flare-up between Kenneally, captain and rack end of the visitors, and "Turk" Edwards, giant Redskin, about a minute before the finish.

Wray couldn't have meant it when he predicted a victory for his charges. He must be given credit for enough football knowledge to realize that his outfit couldn't beat a team like the Redskins once in a thousand starts.

The Redskins were plainly tired and worn after their tough tussle in Detroit last Wednesday night, but they dominated the play from start to finish, especially during the last half.

SHEPHERD TOPS GRID SCORERS

Leading the way as his team smashed out a 40-0 victory over Boston College on Saturday, B Shepherd, Western Maryland halfback, scored 21 points and boosted his total for the season to 57. His closest rival is Jay Berwanger, Chicago's great halfback, who scored 41 points.

3 U. S. Horses Well Backed in Stake

London, Oct. 22 (AP)—Three American-owned horses were well-regarded today in the callover of betting odds for the historic Cambridgeshire, to be run at Newmarket, October 31, over the mile and a furlong distance.

William Woodward's Bondsmon was well regarded at 18 to 1, while Victor Emanuel's Statesman and A. C. (Brother) Bostwick's Mate were quoted at 25 to 1.

Mary Tudor, the three-year-old French-bred mare is the favorite at 8 to 1, with Wychwood Abbott 100 to 9, in second place, and Caymanas 100 to 8.

Navy Coach Wins, But Then Loses

Included in the loot was a gold watch given Miller for his part as one of the "Seven Mules" of Notre Dame's national championship team of "Four Horsemen" fame.

PITT, LIONS IN FEATURE GRID UPSETS

OUTSTANDING JOBS

Minnesota's convincing victory over Pittsburgh, 13-7; Columbia's first defeat of the year by Navy, 18-7; Holy Cross' aerial attack which downed Harvard, 26-6, Colgate's first setback by Ohio State, 10-7; the Boston College collapse at Western Maryland, 40-0, Michigan State's fourth straight with Manhattan the victim, 39-0, St. Mary's intersectional triumph over Fordham, 14-9; Michigan's first victory of the year, against Georgia Tech, 9-2; Tulane's narrow squeeze by Georgia, 7-6; New Hampshire's trouncing of Maine, 14-7; Oregon State's comeback in the last moments of play to tie Southern California, 6-6; Notre Dame's second stage in the comeback trail with a 13-0 surge over Carnegie Tech, Chicago's jump to the top of the "Big Ten" by its 41-0 walloping of Indiana; and Princeton's last minute touchdown which edged Washington and Lee, 14-12.

MOST SIGNIFICANT GAME

Minnesota's elimination of Pittsburgh as a possible national champion. The mighty Norsemen slumbered for three periods. But while 65,000 spectators sat gasping with excitement, the Golden Giants rose in their might in the final period and in two tremendous blasts turned a rout into a victory and took first place among the elect of the country.

MOST THRILLING PLAYS

Gibby Young's 101-yard touchdown run for Washington College which defeated Johns Hopkins Univeristy, 13-0; Joe Maniaci's 80 yard touchdown run which gave Fordham an early lead over St. Mary's; Buzz Borries' 30 yard touchdown romp which aided in the Navy victory over Lou Little's Columbia Lions, Jennings' return of a punt 61 yards to give Michigan its only touchdown of the season and its first victory of the year.

GENERAL COMMENT

Saturday's games lured the season's biggest crowds despite wet weather in many parts of the country. Sixty-five thousand watched Minnesota trim Pittsburgh; 50 thousand viewed the Fordham-St. Mary's game at the Polo Grounds; Baker Field held 35,000 for the Navy-Columbia game; Harvard entertained 40,000 for the Holy Cross game, and 25,000 sat through the Princeton-Washington and Lee game.

Columbia, Pittsburgh, Fordham, Harvard and Colgate joined the defeated class for the first time. Minnesota, Santa Clara, Michigan State, Dartmouth, Temple, Syracuse, Duke, Navy, Michigan State, Chicago, Illinois, Princeton, Western Maryland, Northeastern, Holy Cross and Detroit continue among the unbeaten teams.

Kicking and Pass Defense Crimson Weak Spots

By H. R. (Tack) Hardwick
All-time All-America back at Harvard

Hobin—Mr. Hobin, if you please—Mr. J. H. Hobin of Holy Cross to be exact.

I want to play on his side.

What a game he played.

A smarter, more able passer has not graced the Harvard Stadium in many years. Not alone was his execution in passing superb, his [illegible] and his judgment [illegible] were masterly.

A [illegible] that Harvard was [illegible] the passer [illegible] the defensive backs were none too [illegible] receivers [illegible] the [illegible] and the [illegible] with that [illegible] which make [illegible] things [illegible].

The [illegible] underlying reason Harvard lost the game. No, I change that. Harvard did not [illegible] the game—Holy Cross won it.

Out of five completed passes by Holy Cross, four resulted in touchdowns.

Those scoring passes netted respectively, 72, 27, 27 and 28 yards. Had it been purely a practice session with no Harvard team opposing, the execution of those passes, so crisply thrown and so exactly timed would have been a [illegible] accomplishment.

HOBIN DESERVES CREDIT

It was, furthermore, not a case of an inspired flash in the [illegible] series of lucky shots. I arrived early and watched Holy Cross warm up. Hobin was limbering his passing arm. The longer I watched the more uneasy I became.

That trouble was brewing was as evident as the neck on a giraffe.

Well, enough of Mr. Hobin.

Still I sincerely wish him continued success as I am morally certain ability such as he showed, did not just happen.

That young man has worked hard. He may have possessed a certain natural ability to start with, but such a finished performance spells determination and perseverance. Good luck to him!

While on passes let us turn the picture around and consider Harvard's weakness in defending against them.

The best place to protect against forwards is behind the opponents line of scrimmage when the play is developing. Successful passing requires perfect timing.

MAKE THE PASSER GET RID OF THAT BALL

Press him so hard that he feels as though he held a red hot potato in his hand and that his sole thought is to locate some place to drop it.

That Harvard failed to do. Hobin was seldom harried or hurried. He was permitted plenty of opportunity to size up the situation, select his receiver and pass with deliberation.

Harvard Cuts Price in Steel Stand

The Harvard Athletic Association, with the approval of the Dartmouth Athletic Association, announces that prices for seats in the steel stand have been reduced from $3.30 to $1.65 for the contest with the Big Green on Saturday.

On one occasion when the receiver seemed [illegible] he actually [illegible] to a potential receiver and waived for him to swing to the right. That pass was not completed to be sure but it presented a graphic [illegible] of the Crimson's weakness in pressing the passer.

HARVARD'S WEAKNESSES

B[illegible] showed [illegible] of [illegible] that [illegible].

[illegible] of the third period [illegible] 6 and [illegible] game Holy [illegible] pass [illegible] the Crimson 34-yard line [illegible] and ran it back to the 16-yard mark.

Had he deliberately grounded the ball Harvard would have gained possession on the 34-yard line.

It was not the loss of 18 yards in itself which was costly, but the fact that on his own 16-yard line Harvard's quarterback was rigidly restricted in his choice of plays. He must play safe and kick. He did.

Then followed another quick exchange of punts in which a short Harvard kick coupled with a neat 15-yard run back almost immediately was followed by a Hobin to Kidd touchdown pass.

Later Blackwood on third down in the 10-yard zone behind his own goal line attempted to bat down a pass which he could readily have caught for a touchback making it Harvard's ball on the 20-yard line.

Instead of striking the ground, which even then would have allowed Holy Cross another attempt, it ended up in the arms of McCann for an avoidable touchdown.

I heard many remarks to the effect that "McCann was awfully lucky." I do not concur in that opinion. McCann was on the spot; he thought and acted quickly in completing the sensational catch.

"That's not luck. That's smart opportunism.

While we are handing out praise let's not overlook the beautiful interference Avery made on Bilodeau paving the way for Morandos' 72-yard touchdown run. Then the all-around excellence of Morandos' play demands recognition.

He, to my mind, was the outstanding man in the Holy Cross line of which so much had been expected, but which failed to live up to those expectations.

It was not so much however, that the heavy and supposedly overpowering Holy Cross line failed, as that the lighter Harvard front line rose to unexpected heights.

Led by Capt Gundlach, they carried the battle to their weightier and more experienced opponents in no uncertain measure. The fine hand of Adam Walsh, Harvard's line coach, was in distinct evidence.

CRIMSON LOOKING UP

From end to end the linemen functioned in vastly improved manner and gave unmistakable warning that with further experience and with a bit more finesse, they will hold up their end against the best of opponents.

Haley handled his offense intelligently and Harvard was definitely less effective with him on the sidelines. More participation in games on the part of his substitutes probably will lessen this noticeable gap as the season develops.

Holy Cross was pronouncedly the better team, though not as much better as the final score would seem to indicate.

A little more fire and nicety of execution in its mammoth line, to permit the running attack of an unusually able string of backs to match their excellence in the passing game, and Holy Cross will achieve the brilliant record its adherents have been prophesying.

As for Harvard there is no cause for discouragement.

It put up a splendid battle for three periods against a team distinctly superior in manpower and in experience.

With correction in two paramount weaknesses, its kicking game and its defense against passes, the Crimson will prove a worthy foe to any aggregation.

Arlington tacklers received Halfback Johnny McClorey of Malden with open arms, but he didn't enjoy the greeting at all. Note 1, 2 and 3, Arlington boys, ready to give him a rough reception. Note arrows pointing to two Malden blockers, who apparently blocked one another. And only one Malden blocker is in a position to help the back.

Perhaps these pictures tell why Malden suffered its first loss, 12 to 0. McClorey, by the way, played a fine game. But he couldn't block and run at the same time. (Pictures by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Crisler To Drop Single Wing Back

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 22 (I.S.)—Fritz Crisler is thinking of changing his "system."

An advocate of [illegible] wing back formation for [illegible] since coming to the Tigers, [illegible] thinks too many teams are [illegible] it now, opponents are too accustomed to it.

Tears Prove Tiger Fans Have Spirit

It was revealed today by spectators at the Washington and Lee game here Saturday that when it appeared likely the General would defeat the mighty Tiger gridiron machine numerous students in the stands reached such a point of extreme intensity that they broke into tears.

PAIR OF 60-MINUTE TACKLES WOULD PUT HARVARD ON PAR WITH ANY TEAM IN EAST---GRIMES

By Bill Grimes

[illegible] must have [illegible] fore [illegible] ton. A [illegible] came [illegible] the bigg [illegible] Don't let [illegible] Holy Cross was [illegible] Harvard [illegible] than scene [illegible] and McC [illegible] the Crusader points—With a couple of outstanding, 60-minute tackles Harvard would be a troublesome opponent for any club in this vicinity.

Dartmouth has walked through four games without showing anything to the Harvard, Yale and Princeton scouts. It required two hours and 55 minutes to play the Dartmouth-Virginia game, due to over-officiating. George Marshall was all hot and bothered after the Redskin-Philadelphia game. He is a sworn enemy to the type of football played by the pros yesterday. He demands that the game be opened up so that the fans will get a return for their money. Usually, blocks such as that by which Leonard Avery took Tom Bilodeau out of Vic Morris' path are seen only in the pro game. It was a gem. Had not the Hyde Park boy been right on his job, there'd have been no touchdown on that play.

Before they saw Buzz Borries in action, the New York football populace were of the opinion that they were doing Al Barabas an injustice to mention the name of any other back in the same breath with his. Midshipman Borries showed them something they and Lou Little will long remember. Lieutenant Tom Hamilton, Navy coach, predicted a Navy victory over Columbia if Borries, Kentucky's gift to Annapolis, was available for service. Borries scored twice against the Lions and was mainly responsible for Navy scoring its first victory over Columbia on the gridiron.

There is not a college or pro coach in the country who would not welcome "Hip" Moncewicz, the [illegible] Holy Cross [illegible] Speaking of Moncewicz brings to mind that Bob Haley and Chet Litman did a wonderfully effective job blocking the big Crusader on [illegible] the toughest play in the game to defend against.

Detroit's chances of knocking Villanova back were dissipated when Doug Nott was forced out of the game by injuries at the close of the third period. . . . The four games played in New York on Saturday drew approximately 123,000 customers. . . . Shaun Kelly and Bob Knapp have by no means clinched their end jobs at Harvard. They did not look one bit better than Dubiel and Geer against Holy Cross . . . Michigan lived up to its agreement and did not play Willis Ward, its colored star against Georgia Tech . . . "Slip" Madigan, apparently rates Herb Schreiber over Harry Mattos as a St. Mary's left half back. But, after the Fordham game, few of the experts agreed with him.

[illegible] Chicago is tops [illegible] All Berwanger did [illegible] touchdown, score [illegible] and pass to John Baker for the third. . . . It's even money that S. M. U. will knock off Fordham Saturday in New York. [illegible] stuff the week after playing the Gaels of St. Mary's. Bill Lone Star Dietz is now a Tom [illegible] He likes the former B. C. [illegible] spirit, as well as his ability.

Although they took a terrible shellacking from Western Maryland, the B. C. Eagles are by no means washed up . . . Even in the face of what happened in Baltimore, I'll still say that Joe McKenney will develop a winning combination at the Heights and that, unless Holy Cross has more stuff than it showed in the Stadium, he'll turn the Crusaders back again.

VIRGINIA GAME HURTS GREEN

Hanover, N. H., Oct. [illegible] Victory over Virginia Saturday may cost Dartmouth four players.

The veteran Erion, making his first appearance, strained his weak shoulder on his first tackle, while Clark wrenched his ankle after he had been in but a short while.

The most serious loss came with the injury of Harry Deckert, regular quarterback, who dislocated a shoulder. He is not expected to be ready for the next game with Harvard at Cambridge Saturday.

Jim Aieta, the other injured member of the Big Green, who twisted his knee when he slipped on a wet table in the locker room, may be idle for a few days, but the coaches hope to have him ready to face the Crimson.

Jockey Luther, on Time Supply, lodged a claim of foul at the finish of the race and the claim was upheld. Lady Reigh, which finished second, was moved up to the winning position, and Time Supply, which finished third, was given second money. Peters was suspended for the foul. Grimes Leads, Lane Trails in Poll

The [illegible] of the forecasters of football games is getting to be a [illegible] tricky one, with upsets [illegible] weekly plaguing the would-be seers.

The [illegible] Bill Grimes was proclaimed [illegible] in the American [illegible] of the past week [illegible] had [illegible] Navy [illegible] which was [illegible] by the Middies in one of the upsets of the day.

Just to show how easy it is for the soothsayer of the one week to be the sucker of the next, there is the sad case of pudgy little Fred Lane, who led the predictors not one week but two.

This week however finds Mister Lane perched on the high chair in the corner of the sages' room with the dunce cap (booby prize) perched over his high brow. He had seven wrong selections.

Bill Connell, the erudite school sports expert, shared the chair with Lane. Connell, too, had seven wrong picks.

The Boston College-Western Maryland, Columbia-Navy and Southern California-Oregon State games generally confounded the would be seers. Pittsburgh-Minnesota also took a heavy toll, with the leaning generally toward the Panthers.

Coach James (Fiddle) Morley will put the squad through an intensive training grind. There will be two workouts daily, one in the afternoon at 2 30 at the West End House gymnasium, Blossom street, and the other at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium starting at 8 o'clock in the evening.

In line with the club's policy in extending an opportunity to local boys to make the grade, there will a large squad of promising youngsters working out with the regulars.

HOLY CROSS ON WAY TO CROWN, SAYS HANLEY

By L. B. "Pat" Hanley

Head Coach at Boston University

(Written exclusively for and copyrighted by the Boston American and the International News Service)

Holy Cross, Dartmouth, Tufts and Northeastern are the only undefeated elevens left in New England.

That powerful Holy Cross team is certainly living up to every fine thing I've said about it. After its smashing victory over Harvard the Crusaders showed conclusively that if they can hurdle Colgate they will be on their way to a eastern [illegible].

Harvard was far from disgraced Saturday. The Crimson held the powerful Crusaders for three periods and even led at the start of the game. It was simply a case of a [illegible] team meeting an eleven much too strong.

Greater Boston's two undefeated teams came through as expected. Tufts stopped Connecticut State and Northeastern humbled C[illegible]. The Huskies are certainly playing [illegible] football when one considers that it is only the second year they have had the grid game. My friend Al McCoy is deserving of much credit.

BROWN AND B. C.

It [illegible] quite difficult to understand Brown's collapse at the Bowl. I can't quite stretch my imagination far enough to picture Yale being 37 points better than Brown.

Ironically enough the Eli downed the Bears in the department where the McLaughrymen were supposed to shine. Yale completed nine out of fifteen passes for 112 yards while the Bruins gained three yards on [illegible] only successful pass out of eight shots.

Almost as unexplainable as Brown's downfall was the trouncing Boston College received from Western Maryland. These two defeats prove that even major college elevens can get an attack of the "buck" and be completely swept off their feet. Nobody can make me believe that either the Eagles or the Bears are as bad as Saturday's scores show.

Dartmouth continued merrily along the unlefeated path by brushing aside Virginia. The Southerners wilted after the first half and Dartmouth scored three touchdowns after being held to a lone score in the first two periods.

Up at Lewiston my Boston University Terriers completely upset my prediction and came from behind in the last three minutes of play to defeat Bates 8 to 6. All I can say here is that you have to give any team as small as mine credit that can come from behind and win as the Terriers have against Bates and New Hampshire this year.

Two of my young sophomores receiving their first real baptism, Russ Lynch and Vincent Sandercock, performed far beyond my expectations as did several of the others. I have felt all along that the Terriers had a real ball game in their system and Saturday proved that I was right.

WILDCATS WILD

B. I Cowell's New Hampshire team certainly knocked old man prediction for a fare-thee-well when it trounced a strong University of Maine team, 24 to 7. I figured Maine would win by a point with the possibility that the Wildcats might come through, but I never thought the Durham outfit would display the power it did.

Those grand old upsets are running wild again all over the country except here in New England. While it is true that several of the games have not run just true to expectations, nevertheless there has not been a local upset that has made the hardened grid fans gasp.

I look for a few in the very near future, however, and the first may come next Saturday if Harvard can top Dartmouth—remember, I said, "if."

Col. Huston's Visit Recalls Old Feud With Ruppert

By Damon Runyon

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Oct. 22—Colonel T. L. Huston was in New York last week renewing old acquaintances.

The estate consists of two big islands, Butler and Champney, in the Altamaha river, near the little town of Darien, which is about 13 miles from the larger and better known city of Brunswick.

Colonel Huston's [illegible] house is built on the site of the old home of Fanny Kemble, the famous English actress who married a Butler in the long ago and who is said to have had much to do with preventing the recognition of the Confederacy by England during the Civil War.

Colonel Huston has a summer home on Sea Island near Brunswick, where [illegible] the greatest of our American playwrights, Eugene O'Neil, [illegible]. It is on Sea Island that Sheriff Bill McGeehan, the famous sport writer, is buried. He was one of Colonel Huston's dearest friends.

ONLY SURVIVOR

The colonel is now the only survivor of a celebrated triumverate, Huston, McGeehan and Uncle Wilbert Robinson. The latter died in Atlanta, where Colonel Huston had restored him to active baseball life.

It was often said that Uncle Wilbert Robinson was the chief cause of a difference of opinion years ago between Colonel Huston and Colonel Jacob Ruppert when they were the joint owners of the New York Yankees, and the greatest combination of real sportsmen that the game has ever known.

Colonel Huston was in France as an officer in the Engineers when Colonel Ruppert selected the late Miller Huggins as manager of the Yankees. Colonel Huston wanted Robinson and it was reported that the Huggins selection started a strain in the business relations between the sporting colonels, ending in Colonel Huston selling his interest to Colonel Ruppert.

As a matter of fact Colonel Huston's physicians insisted on his retirement from business life and he would have sold out regardless of any other consideration. Colonel Huston and Colonel Ruppert parted friends after one of the most unusual and picturesque associations in the history of sport.

They bought the Yankees in 1915 from Frank Farrell, chipping in about a quarter of a million apiece. The two colonels scarcely knew each other when they began the partnership that was to become famous.

They bought only the American League franchise and a couple of players. The Yankees had no permanent home at the time and no playing assets of any value. Colonel Huston was the active head of the business for a time, Colonel Ruppert, then busy with his brewery, looking on at his new investment somewhat amused.

"WHAT A TOY!"

"A toy?" said Colonel Huston. "Do you know how much we've got in this thing, Jake? Just $750,004 apiece!"

They paid the then staggering price of $139,000 for Babe Ruth. When they were kicked off the Polo Grounds by the owners of the Giants, they bought the site across the Harlem river from the William Waldorf Astor estate for about $650,000 and built the costly Yankee Stadium. They turned a "toy" into an asset worth into the millions.

BRUINS WAIT ARRIVAL OF SHORE

QUEBEC City, Oct. 22—Awaiting [illegible] of Dit Clapper and [illegible] Shore to complete the squad, [illegible] Nels Stewart [illegible] and [illegible] the Bruins enter a week of [illegible] scrimmaging and probably more Regular-Yannigans games to get ready for the first exhibition game with Les Canadiens next Monday in St John N B.

The newcomers to the squad, aided greatly by Tiny Thompson in goal, took the first practice game 5-3 with Jack Shill, left winger from the Toronto Leafs [illegible] three goals, the outstanding bit of attacking work of the [illegible]. The play of Shill, and Charles Sands, who also came to the Bruins from Toronto, was most satisfactory in the opening session and there is no question that both will make good with the Bruins.

Manager Frank Patrick and General Manager Art Ross of the Bruins were most interested in the play of the newcomers in the first actual hockey of the training period. They had eyes especially for the two amateur wingers, Lespi from Sudbury and Duncanson from Winnipeg, both of whom handle themselves well. Another player watched closely is Joe Bretto of Minneapolis, the youngster who came to Boston for a tryout last winter and who played defense with Archie Wilcox in the first practice game.

The regulars from last year's Bruins team have reported in pretty good trim though Nelson Stewart is overweight as usual and will ned considerable work before he is ready for the league opening. Johnny Gagnon is close to playing weight and Marty Barry has much less weight to take off than a year ago. Neither Shore nor Clapper have trouble keeping their weikht down in the off-season and it is expeced they will quickly round into playing for mafter they report this week. Clapper is due today and Shore Thursday.

Patrick refuses to commit himself on how the Bruins look, or what men will be on the squad when it opens against Toronto on November 8. It is evident from the sidelines that he is working hard on Jean Pusie, who is fast and a good shot. The rookie netted a goal and assisted in two others in yesterday's practice, and if he should develop as hoped he would go a long way in settling the Bruins' defense problem.

In the lineups in the practice game were: Regulars — Poulin, goal; Bretto and Wilcox, defense; Seibert, Barry, Lespi and Beattie, Stewart, Gagnon, forwards. Yanniigans—Thompson, goal; Pusie and Joe Jerwa, defense. Shill, Sands, Giroux and F. Jerwa, O'Neil, Duncanson, forwards.

As a moderately long term holding we feel that Armour common is worth attention. Earnings for the full year 1934 should be good and those willing to make an investment in an industry on its way out of the doldrums may reasonably see a swing up to around $12 per share.

It is possible to take a Pollyanna view of the extended lag in the heavy industries. Diversion of allotted public works funds to needed direct emergency relief probably prevented rising costs in the heavy industries. And the protracted lag resulting is now said to be influencing sufficient pressure on the price level to bring prices down to a level where they soon stimulate private enterprise. This as we say, may be somewhat Pollyannaish but if true will be a mighty influence in restoring full business recovery next spring.

Ages lived in almost every year. Many changes. A business built on hopes and aspirations of people enamored of the glitter of easy money has been largely liquidated. A heartache for those who had invested their future or their capital in the commissions and security business. A business so altered today that one hardly recognizes it. Yet, if the wild, unthinking days are barred return, few brokers will tell you they have regrets.

The President's speech, Wednesday night, will be the focal point.

His address to the bankers' convention is assuming the aspect of one of the most important of his entire administration for it will culminate the recent efforts to win the co-operation of big business and finance in a push to stimulate trade.

It would seem significant that the [illegible] from a Wall Street point of view [illegible]

The change in the law permits the taking of losses on securities only against market profits, and not against business.

November and December in years past have always seen a lot of selling, particularly in groups around their lows for the year, to establish losses.

Reports around are that Consolidated Gas will show between 30 and 40 cents a share for the third quarter against the 50-cent dividend requirements . . . The next dividend meeting, though, isn't until the end of December.

Trade Summary Finds Consumer Lines Gaining

New York, Oct. 22.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation the Standard Statistics Company, of New York, currently comments as follows:

The seasonal upturn in general business is still being confined almost entirely to the lighter consumer lines with the heavy industries remaining comparatively dormant. Industrial production in October is only slightly above the low levels of the year.

Prospects for a more pronounced revival in industry apparently depend primarily on the dual factors of improving confidence and the enforced buying of supplies by manufacturers and consumers who have allowed inventories to run low.

In the steel industry consumption [illegible] since early [illegible] to disturb the existing [illegible] price structure [illegible] buyers [illegible] holding off for lower price. Automobile production is declining farther this month but a rather sharp increase is quite definitely indicated for November.

Business particularly in the capital goods lines is reflecting the cumulative effect of uncertainties during the recent past on the general outlook. The constructive attitude which is currently taking shape at Washington is therefore of the highest importance as a business factor and may result in some acceleration of the seasonal revival of activity during the late fall.

EMPLOYMENT SHRINKS IN CALIFORNIA

By B. C. FORBES

Universal Service

San Francisco, Oct. 22.—Until Socialist-Communistic Upton Sinclair flared up so sensationally as candidate for the governorship, California had every month this year enjoyed an increase in numbers of employed and in [illegible] September [illegible] both [illegible] thanks [illegible] determination to wreak industrial, financial, agricultural, economic, social revolution, [illegible] securities shrivel [illegible] of millions of dollars [illegible]

B. C. Forbes

These are [illegible] main actual achievements to date, supplemented by squelching the spirit of enterprise. And supplemented, of course, by the "gold rush" on the part of deluded myriads of penniless people [illegible] every corner of [illegible] eager to live in idleness and plenty for the rest of their lives at the expense of California's employed wage earners and other useful, industrious, productive, tax paying citizens. This inundation threatens to swamp the state, with consequences unforgettable.

Without any aid heretofore from Don Quixote Sinclair, California would seem to have been offering opportunities and attractions comparing favorably with most other sections: Registrar Charles J. Collins computes the state's population has increased more than two millions in the last four years, lifting the total to approximately 7,8[illegible]

This was before Sinclair dangled a pot of gold free to fall at the end of his gubernatorial rainbow.

(Parenthetically as the ludicrousness of the promises is being exposed and recognized, he is toning down his rainbow's colors greatly and is either reducing the size of the golden pots or withdrawing them altogether.)

Small Interest Noted in Bond Trading

By Associated Press

New York, Oct. 22.—The new week brought no appreciable interest in the bond market but due to light offerings prices held fairly well. [illegible] through the [illegible] U. S. Governments were steady within narrow ranges of [illegible]

[illegible] the federals were [illegible] on the lower coupon rate, moved up 4-32ds to 102.4, or slightly above a parity with the 3⅛s of 1944-46, which at 102.3 were up 2-32ds. Home Owners 4s eased 4-32ds to 98 and Federal Farm Mortgages 3s were 2-32ds lower at 98.

Gains which for the most part were limited to half a point occurred in American Smelting 5s, International Telephone 5s Nickel Plate 4½s, Pennsylvania General 4½s, Southern Railway 4s, Texas Corp 5s, Union Pacific 4s, United Drug 5s and Western Union 5s. Pacific Gas & Electric 5s and Kansas Gas & Electric 4½s ruled a shade lower.

MARKET TURNS HEAVY IN LATE DEALINGS

Failure of the list to follow through on the early rise, which reflected optimism over stimulating developments at the bankers' convention, led to some selling in the last hour, and found the market thin.

GAINS CUT

Early gains running to 2 points were cut down and, in a number of cases, losses were substituted. Issues to go under the previous close were U. S. Steel, Chrysler, Westinghouse and Case Threshing, the last named slipping a point.

Rails, which had gone ahead at the start, gave way easily, Atchison losing a gain of more than a point.

Oils displayed a firmer tone throughout on the hope of an early settlement of the gasoline war. Utilities were quiet, with Consolidated Gas showing some support after the decline at the close of the week. Liquor shares were firm.

Grains followed the pattern of stocks, being up nearly 2 cents a bushel at one time, but slipping at the end. Other commodities were mixed. Bonds were irregular and the dollar strong.

Trading was very quiet with volume near the low levels of the year.

VOLUME DISAPPOINTS

Commission house commentators, while still moderately bullish, were somewhat disappointed that the equities market was unable to attract any volume buying. The inability of the list to absorb the supply of stock overhead was said to have engendered additional caution among the speculative forces.

With all eyes trained on Washington, the anticipated address of the President before the bankers' convention on Wednesday was being keenly awaited as a source of further illumination of the administration's policy and a possible market spur of prime importance.

Although inflation has apparently been a minor market factor recently, some long-term buying was reported on the theory that further dollar devaluation is more likely than not in view of the mounting government debt and the extreme difficulty which will be encountered in any attempt to balance the budget. At the same time, some banking circles feel the changes are favorable for holding the dollar at its present level and that improvement in business generally will greatly enhance the prospects of stabilization.

The offering of $50,000,000 of home owners loan 3 per cent. bonds of 1952 by a nation-wide banking group was of much interest to the financial district. With the bonds fully guaranteed by the government, bankers, generally, felt that the operation would be highly successful.

INSULL 'WASH SALE' CHARGE ATTACKED

By International News Service

Chicago, Oct. 22—Evidence concerning alleged "wash sales" by interlocking Insull utility companies in an effort to "rig" the market for Corporation Securities Co. stock today was attacked by defense counsel for Samuel Insull and 16 co-defendants on trial for mail fraud.

Floyd E. Thompson, counsel for the Insulls, questioned R. A. Knittle, government auditor, who, Saturday, testified the Insull units sold and bought stocks without changing ownership.

Thompson brought out that Knittle had not examined the books of all the brokerage houses in Chicago and thus had not made a complete examination of all the 50 odd Insull companies.

Attacking a chart Knittle had presented in court to substantiate the testimony regard "wash sales," Thompson attempted to show that both purchases and sales of corporation securities stock had been considered, whereas the stock exchange records take only sales into consideration.

DAUGHTERS OF VENUS -:- By Robert Terry Shannon

CHAPTER XXX

"I didn't hear you come in last night," Juliet said at breakfast.

Neither did Juliet know that Katie had worn her evening wrap and the peach-colored gown. Also she was equally unaware that Katie had slipped in shortly before dawn and had not yet been asleep.

"I was careful not to wake you," yawned Katie. "I spent the evening out with a friend."

"Keep the house running as smooth as you can," Juliet told her. "I'm too busy to stay home much these days."

"Yes, Miss Juliet," said Katie, meekly.

Gottlieb had amazed Juliet by the thoroughness with which he had gone into the manufacturing proposition with McSpadden.

The peculiar thing about Gottlieb was that he never tired.

This went on for a week before he thought of departing for New York. One evening had sufficed to consume McSpadden's stock of information.

Gottlieb visited other chemists, manufacturing plants, importers, soap factories, bottle and package makers, warehouses.

Avocados, recently, had become popular in the West as a base for face creams. By now he was estimating everything by the ton. Juliet gave up trying to keep pace with him.

"This thing is so big we may establish branches all over Europe," he told her at the airport.

WIFE CREATES SCENE

On the strength of the brilliant prospect Juliet bought a tan-colored coupe for herself and began planning to build a house with a patio.

O'Hara came into her office shame-faced.

"I'm sorry as can be," he said.

"What was the matter?" she asked him, noticing the shadows under his eyes. "Sick again?"

"No. Just worthless, I guess. Seems to be in the blood. Sorry I let you down."

"Don't worry yourself about me," said Juliet. "You let yourself down."

It was embarrassing to see a grown man gulping like a boy.

"I'm a dog, Juliet," he said lamely.

Had he been a stronger character, Juliet might have blamed him more.

"You'll be all right, Pal," she said brightly. "Everybody's foot slips sometimes. I'd go on a binge myself if I dared."

"But you don't understand—"

"If you start confessing—I'll scream," she said cheerfully. "Take that hairshirt off and go back to your own office."

"I thought I'd be washed up when I got back. Serve me right if you had fired me."

"Forget it. I'm worried about Gottlieb, not you. He has been deadlocked with those New Yorkers for two weeks. His later letters weren't too optimistic. You don't think the deal could possibly fall through, do you?"

O'Hara got his mind off himself.

"Not a chance, Juliet. Those birds are tough, but Gottlieb will come away with their tail feathers."

Juliet was getting so she could not think about the deal without shivering. One hundred thousand dollars, her share, almost made her dizzy.

"It's not the money I worry about," she told O'Hara. "It's the idea that we may bungle it, after all. I'm afraid of losing something I haven't got. Does it ever seem to you that this whole thing is just a dream?"

Her eyes widened and there was a little aching sensation in her temples, for Juliet was continuously restless and short on sleep these days. Under pressure, he noticed she ate less than usual.

LIKE A NIGHTMARE

"This whole place has always been like a nightmare to me," O'Hara said morosely. "I'd like to be married to you and live on an Iowa farm. Or doing hula dances in the South Seas. But don't worry—I'm not proposing. I'm going down to my office and plunge up to my neck in work."

Such was his sincere intention, but an apparition prevented him. An eerie and unearthly Madame Hubert opened the door and walked into Juliet's office.

But it was not the Madame Hubert they knew. It was someone else, a parody, a stranger, an optical illusion . . .

An actual ghost could have been no more startling to Juliet and O'Hara.

"Good Lord!" he gasped. "What have you done to yourself, Madame?"

"Why, Madame, you look—you look—"

Something miraculous had happened to Madame Hubert's face. It was no longer brown and withered, but had a smooth and waxy texture like painted artificial fruit. The folds and hollows and creases and wrinkles had disappeared.

Very slowly Madame Hubert revolved before their eyes like a mannequin exhibiting a gown, and they saw her back was military straight as though she were held taut by invisible steel wires.

"Now you witness me as I really am, my dears," she said in a voice that plastic surgery had not been able to improve. "The butterfly is out of the chrysalis."

Juliet struggled to find something to say.

"It's—it's like being born anew, isn't it?"

The Madame's cruelly rouged lips grimaced.

"Good Lord," blurted O'Hara, "it's ghastly!"

PIVOTS TOWARDS HIM

She pivoted swiftly toward him on her high jeweled heels.

"Pardon!"

"I mean it's uncanny," muttered O'Hara. "I've never seen anything like it in my life."

It was impossible to tell whether Madame Hubert flushed under the enamel of her face, but her eyes blazed and the marcelled head flew erect.

"Must you say such horrible things! I've the right to make the most of myself. Beauty is woman's birthright and I decided to claim it. Am I to be met with sneers?"

"The change is so sensational!" cried Juliet. "You're perfectly marvelous."

"But of course I am!" shot back the madame. "I was always marvelous, but I neglected myself for the business. It made other women feel beautiful just to look at me. That was my success secret. But such days have passed."

"Of course they have," said Juliet, moved by the strangest pity that ever disturbed her heart.

"How old would you say I appear?"

"A very young 30—at the outside."

Madame Hubert turned to O'Hara. "And you?"

A trace of his old grin came back to O'Hara's lips.

"You've got me so groggy, Madame, I could hardly say. About thirty I guess. But you can't expect to dawn on people like this all of a sudden and not bowl them over. You're certainly gorgeous, all right—a regular knockout."

His words, carelessly spoken, fell like gentle rain on her thirsty soul. She went to him and grasped the lapel of his coat.

"Maybe a heart-breaker, eh?" she asked, the creaking caricature of an ingenue.

"Oh, absolutely," he assured her generously. "My heart is smashed to smithereens already and heaven knows what you will do to Von Guerdon."

The antiquated shoulders shrugged gaily.

"Von Guerdon knows all about my rejuvenation. I am his greatest triumph. The man is a great artist. Is your heart really in smithereens, O'Hara?"

O'Hara, over Madame Hubert's head, grimaced helplessly at Juliet. More than anything else he wanted to escape out of this office.

"Sure, I'm in a state of total collapse," he said desperately. "It's wonderful to see you rejuvenated like this. But I suppose you want Juliet to tell you how the business is going."

"Business, pouf! I have decided to forget business for the present. Build it up sky-high, my children, and pile money for the firm in the bank. But, by the way, Juliet darling—business is good, is it not?"

"Marvelous. And we are expecting to sign a contract with the chain stores any day—"

"Good. And how have you been treating my boy?" The glazed hand with the ruby-lacquered nails rested caressingly on O'Hara's arm. "Is he still in love with you?"

"Heavens no!" smiled Juliet.

Again the artificial looking smile appeared on Madame Hubert's scarlet mouth.

"I wouldn't like it if O'Hara continued to love you," she said throatily. "After all, I discovered him, didn't I, O'Hara. Maybe he remembers he owes a little something to Madame Hubert."

"That's quite right," O'Hara scowled shortly. "How can I ever forget it?"

"Oh, touchy, eh? Is that nice? After I make myself beautiful so that you won't be ashamed of me? Naughty boy."

"That's swell," said O'Hara rather aimlessly. "Well, I've got to get back to work."

MOTHER OF TEN NEEDS STOVE

Is there a parlor stove in your attic that you have not used for years?

Maybe it's just taking up room and getting in your way. Then you will be glad to know that there is a mother of 10 young children who can use that stove. Her husband gets work only rarely—no matter how hard he tries—so she can't afford to buy one.

Another Boston Evening American reader may have a few girls' winter in woefully inadequate sum- quite as stylish as they once were, but that still have a good winter's wear in them.

Instead of throwing these coats away, why not write to the Swap Editor? He knows of two little girls who will shiver through the winter ni woefully inadequate summer things unless they get those coats.

Names and addresses can be obtained by those who are interested in these people by writing to the Swap Editor of this paper. He also wants to hear from all American readers who want to swap things.

Maybe you have a chair that you would like to exchange for a clock. Let us know about it and we may be able to find some one who would like a chair and would be glad to give a clock for it.

We will not print names and addresses, but will forward them to interested parties.

Students at Tech Want Circus Back

Tech students want a circus.

A movement is under way at the college to restore the most famous of Tech traditions, which has all the features of a Big Tent circus with a calliope trailing a parade in which the student body in clownish attire tramps through the streets surrounding Tech.

Bill—I'd advise you to watch the great values advertised in the American-Advertiser's Annual Used Car Sale. You'll be sure to find a great "buy" there.

Begin today's "About Faces" series!

This is the first in this week's series, as presented daily by the Boston Evening American. Beginning with today's drawing, those correctly solving the identifications of leading Hollywood stars as they are portrayed in cartoon the remainder of this week will share in the $25 in weekly cash awards.

Visit any three of these leading suburban theaters for clues to today's identifications. The Embassy theater, Waltham; the Central Square theater, Cambridge, and the Rivoli theater, Roxbury. At all of these three theaters the screen offers, "Chained," featuring the stars in today's "About Faces" drawing. "Name the Woman" is the co-feature at the Embassy theater, Waltham. "Jane Eyre" is the co-feature at the Central Square, Cambridge, and "The Defense Rests" is the co-feature at the Rivoli theater, Roxbury.

To correctly solve today's "About Faces" drawing visit any of these three favorite theaters. You will recognize your favorites as they appear in today's drawing. Beneath each drawing you will find a block of squares. These squares equal the number of letters in the names of the stars as they appear at the Embassy, Rivoli, and Central Square Theaters, today. Use the letter given as a clue and mail your entire week's solutions to: The About Faces Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass.

Taxpayers Can Force County Economies

Strongly entrenched as they are, some of these county groups already realize that they are NOT invincible at the polls. And defeat at the coming elections will mean the loss for them of soft jobs long held at the expense of the people.

Note that the recent report of the Federal Bureau of the Census showed that it cost the country $9,662,615,000 between July 1, 1931, and June 30, 1932, to operate 180,650 government units within our States.

This represented a per capita cost of $76.80 in that period for every man, woman and child in the Continental United States.

The cost of Federal Government is NOT included in this estimate. Only those costs for which state and local governments can be held accountable to the voters are included.

IN other words, if you elect only representatives pledged to vote for cutting out unnecessary costs of government, you will have done your part toward lightening this terrific burden of expense that menaces not only your home but also your employment, your means of existence.

There are public-spirited men's and women's organizations in every community.

Let these bodies call on candidates for House and Senate to tell them what they are going to do about county wastefulness. Let these organizations talk "cold turkey" to the candidates for county offices.

Ask the candidates whether they intend to make an honest effort to see what can be done about wasting our tax funds.

Now is the time the candidates will have to put themselves on record. Many have pledged themselves this year to espouse the cause of the common people.

You voters can get somewhere at the coming elections by showing you are in earnest about wanting a BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS.

Europe Keeps Peace

The international tension following the assassination of the Yugoslavian king and the French foreign minister shows signs of rapid abatement.

Tragic and deplorable as all must view the incident, it will not lead to war. The prophets of war could draw a plausible parallel with the murder of the Austrian archduke at Sarajevo and its quick sequel in the outburst of the World War, but this time fundamental conditions were different.

In 1914 the nations of Europe may be said to have wanted war. They courted it. They were prepared. Militarism was rampant. War was regarded as an imminent certainty.

Today it is questionable whether any European power could send its armies across its frontiers.

The people would not march. They are still struggling under the weight of the last war. The lessons of its follies, havoc and cost are still too vivid for the war mania to get a hearing, much less a footing, in the national policy of any country in the world.

As General Jan C. Smuts, the hero of the Boer and World Wars, and former prime minister of South Africa, said the other day:

"Despite the silly drilling and strutting about in uniform, I do not find real war temper anywhere."

Dumb Friends Saved

Countless are the stories of the faithfulness of dogs. And seemingly irresistible is the appeal of their eyes. Yet these things must be lost on thousands of persons.

Otherwise there would be no cause for the fine work that is being carried on here by the Animal Rescue League and the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Last month the S. P. C. A. alone restored 43 stray pets to their homes; its agents traveled 15,568 miles, investigated 389 cases, examined 6824 animals, placed 122 in good homes, made eight prosecutions for cruelty, gained seven convictions and carried out the society's work of mercy among thousands of draft animals and cattle.

So remember these organizations as something more than a place to get an appealing pet free of charge. Help them financially to carry on their good work.

Hunting With a Thrill

The "open season" on deer is under way in Maine. Duck hunters' guns are roaring along Cape Cod. Neither deer nor ducks can be called dangerous game, being quite defenseless.

Paul Philbrick of York Harbor, Me., an easy two hours by auto from Boston, recently harpooned a fighting tuna fish off Bald Head Cliff. And brought the 600-pound battler ashore.

Don't tell us you thought tuna fish always came in cans. They have to be put there. And it takes a MAN to do it! How'd you like to try?

Man of Learning

"Oh, East is East and West is West, and never the twain shall meet
"Till Earth and Sky stand presently at God's great judgment seat."

So sang Rudyard Kipling. But he could hardly have foreseen the visit to Harvard of President Francis Cho-Min Wei of Central China College.

Besides, has not Harvard had its Chinese scholars down through the years? Oftentimes they have been graduated from the university at Cambridge to become leaders in their own land.

This Chinese college president will lecture at the Fogg Art Museum across the Charles Oct. 29, 30 and 31. The educated audience he will meet are well aware that much is to be learned when East meets West and West meets East.

Record of Service

To New England banks come fresh honors.

Current issue of Rand McNally Bankers Monthly contains a compilation of the nation's banks over 100 years old.

To the mighty First National Bank of Boston goes the honor of being the oldest in the country, with its birthday on February 7, 1784.

And to the National Bank of Newbury, of Wells River, Vermont, goes the honor of being the oldest bank serving the smallest community.

A record of service that may well be hailed as a tribute to the stability of New England banks and bankers.

Listen, World! -:- -:- By Elsie Robinson

If anyone had told me fifteen years ago that I would be writing against Upton Sinclair today I would have been both shocked and furious.

Elsie Robinson

I was poor. I had been born poor and known poverty all my life. My father, tragically handicapped by poverty, was in passionate sympathy with the underdog. At the time of the big railroad strikes in California, in the 90's, we fed a continuous, daily stream of idle men—and went without food ourselves to do it. I grew up with pity for suffering, and rage against the greed which caused it, stamped on my spirit like a brand.

I was to learn, through my own bitter sweat and tears, what poverty does to human flesh and spirit. I know, literally, the meaning of that grim phrase, "keeping body and soul together." To support my only child I worked at every task—accepted every expedient—by which we could manage to go on. There was no such thing in my program, or millions like me, as a "living wage." We were lucky to get an EXISTENCE wage. There was hardly enough life in either of us to expect anything more.

I know—to its last hellish detail—that dazed condition of body and mind which makes even hope impossible—much less faith or fury. The dizzy drudgery of a wornout animal, too spent to look for anything beyond its gnawed bones, its ragged bed.

HEART CAN BREAK

There is, however, one ultimate agony which even that broken animal can register. Though it can no longer think—no longer rebel—its heart can still break. Mine broke when I saw my boy dying. He could have been saved if, at the proper time, he could have had proper food and medicine and a healing climate. But I was poor. And his was the fate of the poor. He died for lack of the money one rich woman wastes on a bracelet.

Such was my life until I was nearly 40. Such was the life of those I knew best. And during those years Upton Sinclair's words were our gospel.

I did not, perhaps, accept them as indiscriminately as some of my friends. I came of a family of studious, thoughtful people. We were informed—though shabby . . . accustomed to weigh all arguments. I knew that there were not only two but at least a dozen sides to every question. Yet, in the main, I believed in Upton Sinclair—and felt that the salvation of the working people of America lay through such faith and fury as his.

Today Upton Sinclair has been nominated for governor of California by a tremendous majority. I am not going to vote for him or for anyone else. I am going to throw my vote away.

Politically this is utter folly, but to my mind there are issues greater than politics, and it is because of those issues that I am writing this unsolicited expression, which will probably never see publication.

GET ME RIGHT

I have turned against Upton Sinclair because I honestly believe that he has turned against himself, against all that he stood for and, worst of all, against the people he professed to serve.

Get me right. I believe Upton Sinclair is a good man and sincere. I am sure that he honestly thinks that he is as unselfishly devoted to the welfare of humanity and that he would be a consecrated and capable leader. But I think he's fooling himself.

In the first place, Upton Sinclair is a writer. A good reporter to be sure—interested in practical problems—but, nevertheless, a writer living in a writer's world. I, too, am a writer and I know my tribe. And I'm telling you that the average writer is utterly worthless as a leader.

Not once in a thousand times does a writer contact the callous realities of life for an extended period. Unless and until he has, his theories aren't worth a hoot. Moreover, his very ability to make words live make him a DANGEROUS WILL O' THE WISP. Upton Sinclair is no exception to this rule.

It is because I know the unreliability of Mr. Sinclair's background—and the tragic fascination of his alluring promises—that I am writing this article. Our starving millions have known enough disappointment and despair. But if this man is elected he will lead them into deeper, darker morasses than they have ever yet experienced.

NOT A CAPITALIST

I am not a capitalist. Since my boy died I have given away everything I have earned above my living expenses. And these "living expenses" have been largely devoted to building a ranch for those who are as unfortunate as I once was. No one can accuse me of playing politics or serving the "privileged classes". My heart is where it has always been—with the workers, of whom I am one.

I should perhaps be moved by the plight of Big Business if Mr. Sinclair is elected. I might even be moved by my own plight—for the organization for which I work will doubtless go out on the big wind with all other organizations when, as Mr. Sinclair has triumphantly prophesied, "Private business and private profit come to an end in California". But these are not the issues which move me.

I am moved by the thought of fathers as desperate as my father was—of children as pitifully in need as my little son—of mothers as broken-hearted as myself.

I am thinking of them as I write by day. I am terrified for them as I wake by night. For I see, as only a woman with my opportunity can see, that if Upton Sinclair comes into power the poor people of California are going to know the most shocking misery in our history.

Mr. Upton Sinclair won his huge primary majority because he advanced glowing schemes for the relief of the poor and idle. Most popular and appealing, to the average lay mind, was his "Back to the Land" scheme. THAT SCHEME WON'T WORK, AND IT IS THE CRUELEST BALLYHOO TO CLAIM THAT IT WILL.

You can't solve our unemployment problem by putting the idle flotsam of our cities back on the soil.

DO YOU KNOW WHAT A CARROT COSTS?

DO YOU KNOW HOW LONG YOU HAVE TO WAIT FOR EVEN ONE CROP OF THE HARDIEST VEGETABLES?

DO YOU KNOW WHAT ARE THE CHANCES OF THAT CROP MEETING MATURITY IN THE FACE OF FROST AND DROUTH?

I know. I am a farmer. I work in the dirt myself. I plant carrots. I know what it takes to plant carrots. More than that, I KNOW WHAT IT IMPLIES TO LIVE WITH CARROTS AND DIRT AND NOTHING ELSE BUT.

Even if Upton Sinclair could put millions of people back on the soil—

Even if they know what to do after they got there, or were willing to learn—

Even if they would work after the first novelty had passed—

By the end of three months they'd be back on city streets again.

HE WILL NOT ENDURE THE MONOTONY, THE LONELINESS, THE DREARINESS AND DRUDGERY OF FARM LIFE.

OUR PEOPLE TODAY

He would rather starve and die in a city gutter, under a city neon sign, than raise bumper crops and contented cows.

And even if the average American male would stick, his woman wouldn't. I know. I've tried to make them.

Nor is this necessarily a discredit to the American character. We have no peasant class. We do not believe in peasant classes. For the last fifty years we have held up standards before our children which are contrary to prosaic, poorly rewarded farm life. (Personally I may have my own opinion of such standards, just as personally I prefer to live in the country. But these are not the points at stake. We are discussing American life, AS IS—American people AS ARE.)

We have today a mass of go-getting, mechanically-minded citizens; wised up and pepped up by radios, movies, swift automobiles and compulsory education. Mr. Sinclair now proposes to move these citizens back into an environment and viewpoint which suited their grandparents. Will it work? Be your age!

This is only one of Mr. Sinclair's schemes. These schemes naturally have a tremendous appeal to idle people, from every state, who think it "would be swell to spend a California winter in the country." They also appeal mightily to the harassed taxpayer who is sick of seeing and paying for breadlines in Los Angeles and San Francisco. But if Upton Sinclair is elected governor, we'll be seeing and paying for something much worse than breadlines, brothers—for the same fallacy which makes his back-to-the-land movement impractical underlies them all.

FOR THE UNDERDOGS

I am not a conservative. In the face of real risk to my own position I have stubbornly remained radically minded — a spokesman for the underdogs—vociferously opposed to capitalistic greed, hypocrisy and crookedness . . . and as vehemently advocating any program which seemed to advance justice and progress.

But I do not believe that Mr. Sinclair's program would do this. I do not believe that the time has yet come to bring private business and private profit to an end—AND I BELIEVE THAT THE AVERAGE AMERICAN WORKER WOULD RESENT SUCH A CONDITION, IF IT CAME, AS BITTERLY AS THE BIG BUSINESS MAN, AND WOULD HAVE AS GOOD REASON TO RESENT IT.

Literary theorists know as little of the heart and plight of the common man as bloated capitalists . . . AND ARE AS GREAT A MENACE TO HIM. The simple fact is this — we workers of America would rebel against communism or socialism as keenly as we would against slavery or breadlines. We do not object to "private business" or "private profit." WE SIMPLY WANT A CHANCE TO GET SOME OF IT FOR OURSELVES!

Take a tip from one of 'em—writers listen lovely, BUT UNTIL THEY'VE SWEATED FOR THEIR WORDS THEY DON'T KNOW WHAT THEY'RE ALL ABOUT! And heaven help you, fellow voters, if you try to turn Upton Sinclair's Talkie into a Livie.

Stars and Stripes

That futurist idea of "breakfast in New York and dinner in London" doesn't solve the problem of what we are going to do between meals.

A New Jersey town enforces its curfew law by giving children castor oil. "Hickory oil" used to be just as effective.

"Why, he's one of those ragged individualists."

Berlin is to have bomb-proof cellars. The only way to wreck one is to use a bungstarter.

Three million cattle are doomed to starve to death in Texas this winter, Secretary Wallace is told. If true, Texas may soon be known as the Lone Starve State.

"Inflation," according to the dictionary, means to enlarge with gas or air. And, they've been telling us it means taking forty cents out of our dollar.

Human Side of the News; Making Wealth 'Safe'

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METRO-TONE NEWS

Wandering down along Ticker Lane the other day, I encountered a sad-eyed broker, a man I had seen tossing around hundred dollar bills at a night club a few years ago. He wept not for his vanished wealth. His was a dismal tale of other woes. I ran down his story, and it's one of the oddest twists of these depression years.

Not only in Wall Street, but in Main Street, the bold adventurers of yesteryear are putting everything they have in their wives' names — real estate, securities, automobiles, jewelry, all property, tangible and intangible—so it can't be seized today to pay for yesteryear's dead horses. "The Missus" becomes America's most powerful holding company.

CLEAN-UP CHANCE

The husband, set on having just one more round, breezes home with a story of a nice pool he could get in on if he just had access to that Safety-Pin preferred—it's a cinch—he would need the stock for only a few days.

The wife gives him the eye of a dead dogfish and murmurs that she thinks the key to the safety deposit box was dropped overboard on that trip to Bermuda, and she's so sorry, but she seems to have mislaid her diving suit.

Biting his nails and venting bitter moans, my broker friend told me just this tale:

"And when they get a half-nelson on a little serious money, you couldn't pry them loose with a derrick," he wailed. "Take that little deal I was telling you about. We got our tip right out of the feed box. There's only five of us in on it and it's a big chance to clean up.

"Just for a little four-bit play—I've got some mighty good securities down in the kick if I could only get at them—just for a couple of white chips I'm set to make a killing, and then the wife clamps down on me just like I was a total stranger.

"Of course, you can't explain things like that to a woman—they never had any experience in finance and they don't know what it means to miss a deal like this. Funny about women. Take my wife.

"For years, I didn't dare leave an extra pair of pants in the closet for year she'd have them out. If there was anything around the house I really liked, she was sure to give it away to some bum.

SHE SPENT PLENTY

"She spent plenty, too, and her idea was to always keep things moving. But now all she thinks about is getting everything nailed down. You'd think I was a panhandler, the way she treats me when I try to get hold of a little working capital."

I dried my tears and moved on to make further inquiries in the marts of finance about these heartless women who now rule America.

Yes, it was true. In more reserved and dignified recitals, buttressed with statistics. I heard the story of how two separate trends have converged to shift the financial weight of America to the distaff side of the house.

One has been the steady piling up of legacies and insurance benefits in the hands of widows, and the other the transfer of property to wives to escape deficiency judgments and other procedure by which assets may be seized. The latter, of course, is depression born.

Under the exactions of the Securities Exchange Commission, the sharpshooting fringe in the market has to be quick on the draw, when they want to scalp an eighth, and that's just what they can't do, with the wife sitting on the bankroll like old Farnir planted on his Rheingold.

An investment banker, much more solemn and impressive than my broker friend, put it this way:

"Naturally, with the narrowing field of operation, any dealer in securities must be in an extremely liquid condition to allow quick action. But the necessity of conserving assets has worked against this fluidity of capital. It is obviously true that many operators are carrying assets in their wives' names, and it is also true that women are much more conservative investors than men.

"I have known a few instances in which financiers have been embarrassed by their wives' experience and undue hesitancy in these matters, but it is possible that, as we emerge from the depression, it will have a salutary effect. Undoubtedly women are going to be a strongly deterrent force against wild speculation in the future."

GOLD-DIGGERS GONE

That, of course, is all to the good for the wives, but there is still another score for the women to be chalked up here, and this one is away over on the human side of the news. The gold-digger has gone!

With the passing of the six million-share days, there are no more gorgeous but guileful ladies, sluicing a jade necklace or expensive car out of the day's turnover.

I get this from the jewelers, proprietors of those hushed and ecclesiastical looking shops, where the clerks look like English curates and softly intone the prices for those who have the temerity to ask.

The de luxe jewelry business, they tell me, is a very close reflex of the stock market. And then, around the "hot spots," or rather of the dispirited successors of those once blatant night clubs, one finds a few saps still there, but the feminine miners and sappers of yesteryear have gone.

In the boom years, New York was the happy hunting ground of the great international order of gimme girls, gathering an increment of jewels and furs here and abroad, but mostly here, usually much-married, "bowered in beauty" girls, blooming both in the Sunday supplements and in Peacock Lane.

Trying to trace some of them, I found it was like trying to find the first Neanderthal man. But I did locate one—you would know all about her, if I told you her name. She is a wardrobe mistress in a mid-town theatre, simply dressed, living happily with her fourth husband, and rearing a three-year old daughter. "This is better," she said.

Suppose we head into the big comeback. Will the drums start their old tattoo, the saxophones their provocative moaning and will the tap dancers catch the old rhythm again, will the corks be popping, will the markets be boiling and will the years of the great foolishness come again?

One wonders. It's human to do it all over again. But maybe, with these lean years we are learning some sense. We might even be dragooned into sensible behavior, if the women ever realize their new collective power and decide to use it in behalf of their homes and firesides.

Why Exports Vanished in World War Backwash

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser

Noted Economist and Financial Writer

II.

The Great War destroyed the international economic equilibrium, which was the foundation for a flourishing foreign trade.

As Europe turned from peaceful industry and agriculture to war-making, the established channels of trade were distorted and fundamentally altered.

The Old World turned to America and other non-belligerents to buy the commodities which they normally produced for their own account.

ILLUSORY BOOM

Accordingly an illusory boom developed.

Excess productive capacity was added to the facilities which were temporarily unused in Europe.

George N. Peek, special foreign trade advisor to President Roosevelt, in drawing up his international balance sheets, considers the span from July 1, 1914, to December 31, 1922, as the war period, even though the actual fighting lasted only half that time.

In this eight and one-half year period, America's total exports reached $46,900,000,000, compared with $31,000,000,000 in the previous normal eighteen and one-half years.

In this short war period, America's excess of exports over imports reached the staggering total of $21,100,000,000, and in a single year the excess reached $4,000,000,000.

This abnormal intensification of evolutionary trade tendencies reversed the international financial position of the United States, transforming it from an habitual debtor to the outstanding world creditor.

WHAT STUDIES SHOW

As Mr. Peek's studies show, the outside world paid us for this extraordinary net excess of goods in these ways:

The world sent us, net, $1,700,000,000 in gold. Made private loans in this country of $3,200,000,000, and resold to Americans their investments in American securities to the tune of $2,500,000,000.

At the same time, our tourists spent $700,000,000 abroad; immigrants remitted to their relatives overseas $2,800,000,000; the United States government, after we entered the war, spent $2,200,000,000 abroad; and American investors increased their net holdings of foreign direct investments by $3,300,000,000.

Finally, to make the books balance, the United States Treasury lent the Allies $10,300,000,000, constituting the famous and now dishonored War Debt.

But the greatest cost of the war was not in direct expenditures or in uncollectible accounts receivable.

The principal economic damage wrought was the disturbance to the balanced trade of the world, which had been achieved through decades of evolution.

The seeds for subsequent overproduction were laid where non-European countries, including our own, duplicated the industrial and agricultural facilities of Europe.

Then when peace was restored and Europe went back to work, the whole mechanism for attuning production to demand had been destroyed.

(This is the second of a series of articles dealing with changing foreign trade tendencies. The third will appear in an early issue.)
